Civil Liberties Suspended in Deepening Crisis

Wartime Powers Invoked in Canada

OTTAWA (UPI)—Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, his government badly shaken by the kidnapping of two officials, invoked today the special War Emergencies Act, empowering him to suspend civil liberties and permitting police to make arrests, searches and seizures without warrants.

More than 150 suspected terrorists were arrested within hours after Trudeau gave the go-ahead. In Montreal, Quebec provincial police said 99 persons were arrested in the early dawn hours.

Among those arrested were Robert Lemieux, lawyer for the FLQ; Michel Chartrand, president of the Montreal Council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions; Pauline Julien, French-Canadian singing star; Gerald Gaudin, editor of a weekly and Gaston Miron, poet, an active figure in the separatists' defense fund cause.

In Montreal, more than 1,000 combat-ready soldiers massed at Quebec Provincial Police headquarters and reportedly made daring raids to separatist areas under extended provisions of the act.

Trudeau, grim and determined, took the action never before invoked in peacetime by a Canadian head of state. His two and one-half year old regime was plunged deep into crisis by the deteriorating situation stemming from the kidnap of the officials by the terrorist-separatist FLQ. The act was used twice before—once in each world war.

The Prime Minister announced the actual provisions would be detailed to the House of Commons later. The act has no geographic boundaries, but sources indicated the measure would probably be enforced only in Quebec and broadened police authority would be the major manifestation.

The act gives Trudeau and his cabinet power to make and expand laws by decree, and while he could impose press censorship, order deportation and reinstate the death penalty, there were indications the powers would be exercised mainly to control public assembly and waive search and seizure provisions.

The act provides that within 10 days, 10 members of Parliament can introduce a motion to revoke which must be passed by both chambers of the Parliament dominated by Trudeau's Liberal party. Penalty for conviction of a crime under the act is punishable by $5,000 and/or five years in jail.

In Montreal, the nation's largest city, the situation resembled an armed camp. Soldiers mobilized Thursday afternoon by Trudeau were lined up, guns strapped across their chests, in front of police headquarters in anticipation of trouble with the FLQ. The troops, clad in green fatigues and steel helmets as a chill mist fell in the predawn hours, were equipped with automatic weapons and bayonets. The atmosphere was tense.

The crisis erupted 12 days ago when the FLQ, which wants French-speaking Quebec separated from the English-speaking provinces of Canada, abducted British diplomat James Cross. It escalated Saturday when the separatists at machine gun-point kidnapped Quebec Labor Minister Pierre LaPorte.

Both men were believed still alive despite FLQ threats to execute them if the terrorists' demands for release of 23 prisoners were not met.

Announcement that the War

Emergencies Act had been invoked was made at 5:20 a.m. by an aide to Trudeau.

The action came eight hours after Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, calling it the government's final offer, pledged to recommend parole for five of the 23 separatist political prisoners in exchange for freedom for Cross and LaPorte.

Bourassa set a 3 a.m. deadline, and when the FLQ failed to formally respond by that time, he and Montreal officials informed Trudeau of the state of "apprehended insurrection" they felt existed in the city. Trudeau, a French-Canadian, is a native of Montreal.

The soldiers were mobilized by Trudeau after Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said he had "reason to anticipate a riot or a disturbance."

Minutes after Bourassa's exchange offer, and hours before the deadline, FLQ negotiator Robert Lemieux called the suggestion "a mockery" and said the five men for whom the government is willing to suggest freedom are up for parole anyhow, making the offer meaningless.

Jordan-Guerrilla Truce Totters

(Combined Wire Services)

AMMAN — The truce between Jordan's government and Palestinian guerrillas tottered today under the impact of the most serious incident since the two sides formally pledged peace three days ago.

Sporadic shooting broke out in downtown Amman Thursday night after government security forces stopped a civilian car loaded with copies of Fatah, the guerrilla's official newspaper. One guerrilla was reported dead of gunshot wounds.

In the truce signed Tuesday night, the government promised uncensored distribution of Fatah. But security men raided Fatah's plant here early Thursday and confiscated copies of the paper after it predicted the government would break the truce.

Witnesses said the four passengers in the car were led away and the car set on fire. Army sources said the inter-Arab truce team which framed the pact, listing 10 leave the car. Gunfire followed and one commando sympathizer was shot in the abdomen. Hospital sources said he died later.

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) sent an official note Thursday to the Jordan's military government. In response, King Hussein named a "civilian government" government acts which "are contrary to the accord."

Most counts related to the continuation of military rule here. The Cairo agreement which ended last month's civil war called for an end to the Jordan's military government. In response, King Hussein named a "civilian government" that included many army officers who simply resigned their commissions before joining the cabinet.

At the U.N. in New York, meanwhile, Secretary of State William P. Rogers pursues the Middle East issue with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko tonight following talks with Egypt's foreign minister indicating how difficult it will be to get peace negotiations started.

More and more emphasis is being placed on the need to satisfy the political demands of the Palestinian Arabs by the Nixon administration as it considers Middle East peace prospects. Story page 34.

"At the moment, I cannot say that there is any progress," Cairo's foreign minister, Mahmoud Riad, reported Thursday night after a session in Rogers' hotel suite lasting nearly two hours.

The two did agree to meet again during the current round-robin of conferences among foreign leaders attending the U.N. General Assembly's 25th anniversary session.

The Rogers-Gromyko sessions—another is scheduled Monday night—will also range over President Nixon's new Vietnam peace offer, Berlin, strategic arms curb talks and other East-West issues. In a general way, these meetings will give U.S. policymakers a high-level sounding as to whether the Kremlin is turning to a hard line.

Backers of Nixon's "era of negotiations" policy have been particularly concerned over what they term blatant Soviet and Egyptian violations of the current Middle East cease-fire by setting up more missiles in the standstill zone along the Suez Canal.

Overwhelming 'Yes' Vote for Sadat

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anwar Sadat today was formally proclaimed president of Egypt for the next six years after receiving a 90.4 per cent "yes" vote in the national referendum Thursday, Cairo radio said.

Sadat, 51, and Egypt's acting president since the death of Gamal Abdel Nasser on Sept. 28, got 6,432,587 yes votes to 711,252 nos. Interior Minister Sharawi Gomaa told a broadcast news conference. He said there were 13,814 invalid votes.

Gomaa said 85 per cent of the eligible voters turned out.

Sadat's election by an overwhelming majority was assured by an intensive nationwide campaign on his behalf by other leaders and Egypt's controlled press and radio. There was no other candidate, and no opposition to Sadat was heard in public.

On the diplomatic front Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad was going before the United Nations today to state his nation's case in the continuing Middle East conflict. He already has asked for a full-scale U.N. debate on the Middle East, which probably will come Oct. 26 after the U.N. 25th anniversary celebrations are over.

Israel pulled out of the Middle East peace talks because of the movement of Soviet-built SAM2 and SAM3 missiles within the 31-mile zone and said it would not return until they are taken out and U.S. diplomats close to the scene hinted a compromise might be the solution—a pullout of a symbolic number of the missiles coupled with supplementary military aid to Israel.

In Jerusalem, Israeli elder statesman David Ben Gurion criticized the government for breaking off the talks over the missiles. In a television interview Thursday night, he said he was not certain the talks could have a positive result, "but I think that if there is even the slightest glimmer of hope for peace we should not be the first to interrupt talks."

Cambodian Kickoff Base Under Long Attack

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—North Vietnamese troops bombarded Skoun for eight hours Thursday night in the heaviest attack on the Cambodian supply base in six weeks. Unofficial reports said North Vietnamese forces overran a town 20 miles from Phnom Penh.

The Cambodian Command said the North Vietnamese hammered Skoun, 35 miles northeast of Phnom Penh, with 82mm mortars, machine guns and automatic weapons. The town was the starting point for the largest Cambodian operation of the war and serves as its base for supplies.

Military spokesmen in Saigon said radar-guided U.S. B52 bombers ignored bad weather caused by Typhoon Joan and pounded the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos for the eighth consecutive day. Since Oct. 8, the bombers have dropped at least 15 million pounds of bombs on Communist supply routes in Laos.

"We are well dug in at Skoun," said a Cambodian military spokesman. "Our troops have complete protection of any kind of harassing fire directed against them."

The spokesman said preliminary reports indicated casualties were light. There was no ground attack accompanying the bombardment, the most extensive military activity at Skoun in six weeks.

Military spokesmen said there were unconfirmed reports that elements of the North Vietnamese 165th Regiment Thursday overran Cambodian positions at Rokar Kong, 20 miles north of Phnom Penh.

Military spokesmen said radio contact with the Cambodian battalion at Rokar Kong was lost and the fate of the garrison was unknown. Travelers returning from the Rokar Kong area told military officers the North Vietnamese had occupied the town.

Military sources in Saigon said South Vietnamese commanders have completed a weeklong operation 45 miles southeast of Phnom Penh and withdrawn 2,000 more government troops from Cambodia.

The sources said removal of the rangers, militiamen and river patrol units from areas below the Mekong River town of Neak Leung left 10,000 South Vietnamese troops still in Cambodian territory. Military spokesmen said the operation killed 90 Communist troops at a cost of seven South Vietnamese.

The 25th Infantry Division is being pulled out of Vietnam and two of its three brigades will be gone by Christmas, Saigon sources said today.

The remaining two brigades of the 4th Infantry Division and the 5th Marine Regiment also will be withdrawn under President Nixon's new order.

The 25th Division brigades will return along with the division headquarters to Hawaii, the division's home station.

In Paris meanwhile, Vietnamese peace negotiations remained stuck on deadcenter today, with both sides standing firm on their own peace plans and agreement appearing as far off as ever.

At Thursday's 88th session Hanoi and Viet Cong delegates made it clear that they have rejected President Nixon's five-point peace plan, announced Oct. 7.

"Our rejection is firm, radical and categorical," North Vietnamese delegation spokesman Nguyen Thanh Le told newsmen after the session. By "radical" he said he meant "total."

Chief Viet Cong negotiator, Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh, emphasized this inside the session. "Let there be no illusions on this subject," she told U.S. Ambassador David K. E. Bruce.

Doubts on Downtown Plan

By HUGH REYNOLDS

KINGSTON
Officials from the Urban Development Corporation aren't saying it publicly, yet, but privately they are expressing serious reservations about the feasibility of a major housing project in Broadway East.

In June, feasibility studies were begun on the proposed $3 million, 100-unit moderate income complex in Broadway East just below St. Mary's Church and just above the new city hall now in construction. The studies were started shortly after Mayor Francis R. Koenig signed a memorandum of understanding with UDC.

The reason for serious concern is the soil conditions on the site. According to informed sources, UDC, not satisfied with soil tests run by the urban renewal agency, ran their own and found soil "so bad it won't support a substantial two-story building without piles."

Combined with the "bad soil" is evidence of underground water that could cause serious flooding problems in the future. "Indications are that the area was a swamp in pre-historic times," one UDC official told The Freeman.

The problem can be licked with modern building methods but it costs money and if it costs too much money the project then becomes unfeasible, that is, impossible to build within a reasonable cost.

No one, least of all, Mayor Koenig, wants that to happen.

18 Months for Kolts

By WALTER S. CLARK
NEW YORK CITY

A former executive of a Kingston bank today was sentenced on four counts of embezzlement by Judge I. B. Wyatt in Federal Court here.

Francis H. Kolts, former vice-president of the State of New York National Bank of Kingston, was sentenced to federal prison for one year and six months on each of three counts. The judge ruled the sentences were to run concurrently.

On a fourth count, Kolts received a suspended sentence of five years and was placed on probation for five years. The probation will begin after he serves the 18 months, according to Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. H. Rient.

The mayor says he's been on top of the situation and has been in constant contact with Herbert Morris, regional director for UDC headquartered at New Paltz.

"We want this project to go," Koenig says. "It could be the key to the redevelopment of the whole downtown project."

The feasibility study was supposed to have been completed by the first week in October, about two weeks ago, leading some city officials to suspect that UDC may be withholding publication of a negative feasibility report until after the Nov. 3 elections.

John Sullivan, former UDC director in this area, now working out of Albany, when asked about the "political angle," he said, "You can rule that one out. This is Herb Morris' first project as director. You can bet he'll do everything he can to make that project go."

Another problem is the lack of an access road to the proposed project site, the only one now being the access road off the proposed Ulster Arterial which may not be built for another five years. Mayor Koenig has a proposal before the Common Council for a new road off Meadow Street past city hall into the UDC site. It is under study.

The mayor, meanwhile, wants action, one way or the other on the project. He has reportedly asked UDC to make public the results of its feasibility study early next week.

A Proposal by Sen. Rolison: Special Court for Drug Cases

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON A special criminal court for the handling of narcotics cases in New York City — the east coast source of drugs, was advocated Thursday by State Sen. Jay P. Rolison who told a Kingston meeting of Kiwanians, that drugs, education and the environment are the three principle concerns of the state.

"Our criminal courts are in serious condition, with delays of sometimes three and four years," the Poughkeepsie lawmaker said, explaining that a special narcotics court wouldn't deny anyone their right of due process. Of the drug problem as a whole, Rolison, Republican-Conservative candidate for reelection, called for the cut-off of narcotics imports. He suggested the people as well as the states should be legalized, the senator told of the endless discussion on forces at the source of entry from foreign countries. Rolison advocates increasing penalties for pushers, possibly eliminating the distinction now made between the amount of heroin and the type of felony. "Anyone caught with either eight or 16 ounces of heroin, isn't planning to keep it in his glove compartment," Rolison said, suggesting that either quantity constitutes a potential sale. Asked if he felt marijuana should be legalized, the senator the subject in Albany over the years with upstate legislators against legalization while a number of downstate lawmakers favored it. He has been against it although he has talked of lowering penalties for marijuana users.

"What we are talking about is permissiveness in society today," Rolison stated. "Every time we take a legal step toward something that is wrong, we are eroding away from the basic values that we hold to be true."

Regarding educational costs and related problems Rolison questioned why New York State has the highest per pupil cost in education in the country and told of talk concerning the possible state take over of financial responsibilities for education. Saying there is another side to the coin, however, Rolison estimated that $2 to $3 billion would have to be added to the state budget to accommodate it. Perhaps it would be taking money from one pocket to put into another, he suggested, adding that educators are at last beginning to question the possibility of cutting costs rather than merely seeking more money.

Or the environment, Rolison detailed the progress of the Pure Waters Program for which a $1 billion bond issue was authorized 4 to 1 by voters in 1965.

He told of 323 projects instituted with many others started, planned or finished. Completion of all projects is expected by 1974-75.

He called the state's new Department of Environmental Conservation progressive; he said he expects people will see a real hard-nosed approach to environmental problems. He cautioned, however, that it is not enough to say that the state will get rid of pollution "and we will" but, we have to look at the side effects on business and individuals. "It is easy to be dogmatic," he added, but there are two sides to every issue and we must achieve a balance.

Rolison told of a recent Erie County Court decision which fined an oil company for polluting a river but allowed the company to remain open because shutting it down would have meant the unemployment of several hundred persons. Rolison said the company has instead been given an extension in time to cease pollution.

"What we need," he concluded, "is cooperation from officials at all levels of government and business."

Plans New Operation In County DA Office

KINGSTON Alex J. Nirenberg, Democratic candidate for District Attorney, today announced the new operation of the District office after he is elected.

"The priority, as people know from my campaign, will be the investigation and severe prosecution of those who sell drugs for profit — the drug pusher," said Nirenberg. "To this end, there will be full cooperation, not only between my office and all law enforcement agencies, but also with other District Attorneys in the State who have been so successful in fighting drugs, like Burt Roberts, Gene Gold and Bob Meehan of Rockland County."

"You will all remember what the Sheriff Department was like before Bill Martin took over. It was a do-nothing, know-nothing office for the benefit of the politician. Sheriff Bill Martin has since changed this all. The District Attorney's office, when it is taken over by my new administration, will handle crime 'the Bill Martin way,' that is, the District Attorney's office will become a full and effective law enforcement agency rather than be continued as an orchard of political plums distributed to the party faithful as it is today," said Nirenberg.

"My office will institute a new 'open door' policy. My door as District Attorney will be open to all of the people who constitute the public. I will not shunt anybody off to assistants," he continued.

"Furthermore, I intend to run an inservice legal training course for all our police officers that may be interested in such training. There are many local organizations that do not offer the police officer the training that is necessary today, especially due to Supreme Court decisions that have made law enforcement much more technical and difficult," Nirenberg said.

"A Consumer Fraud Bureau will be finally started in the District Attorney's office. This is an absolute necessity to protect the Senior Citizen and housewives of our County who are being robbed and cheated daily by unscrupulous business people. They are not the only victims. The honest business people of our County are also victimized since they cannot compete with the cheat. It is hard to understand why the existing District Attorney's office has continually ignored the plight of these citizens who have been cheated time and time again. I will put an end to this," continued Nirenberg.

"They're all first-time plans. They are simple and they are inexpensive, but still they will serve a great purpose and service to the people of Ulster County. The people of Ulster County deserve this, they pay for it with their taxes and, morally speaking, it is the duty of any District Attorney's office," concluded Nirenberg.

City Dems Set Speaker For Dinner

W. VANDEN HEUVEL

KINGSTON Neither Arthur Goldberg nor Basil Paterson has made it to Kingston during this campaign although Paterson did appear in New Paltz this afternoon, so William Vanden Heuvel, former Kennedy aide, will represent them.

Goldberg is running for governor on the Democratic-Liberal ticket. Paterson is his running mate, candidate for lieutenant governor. Paterson addressed the New Paltz Rotary Club this afternoon.

Vanden Heuvel is known in New York City for taking a firm position on the issues and speaking out forcefully. According to Ulster County Democratic Chairman Aaron E. Klein, Vanden Heuvel is a "dynamic speaker."

Vanden Heuvel will represent the Goldberg-Paterson team at the annual Democratic City Dinner at the Gov. Clinton Hotel, Saturday night, Oct. 24, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Family of Seven Homeless After Fire Destroys Residence

By WALTER S. CLARK

A family of seven was made homeless Thursday when fire of undetermined origin swept their large frame home on a lane leading off Lucas Avenue Extension in this community.

Several animal pets, including a monkey, St. Bernard and other dogs and cats were rescued before the flames leaped through the 2½-story building that was formerly a boarding house and contained more than 22 rooms, it was reported.

An appeal went out from neighbors for clothing for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smith, who resided in the house with their five sons, whose ages range from 11 to 19 years. The family also is in dire need for household furniture and utensils, because they lost all of their personal belongings with exception of the clothing they wore, a neighbor said.

Firefighters from Hurley, Binnewater and Spring Lake responded to calls shortly after 3:45 p.m., and on arrival they found flames sweeping the huge structure.

It was reported that one fire truck slid in mud on the narrow lane and was bogged down until it was hauled along to permit other apparatus to move on to the scene of the blaze. Swamp-land covers the area on both sides of the lane leading to the Smith residence.

The fire was discovered by the youngest son of the Smiths, 11-year-old Francis, who saw fire in the upper part of the house on his return home from school. The boy called Kingston Central Fire Station and reported the fire. The call was immediately relayed to a dispatcher at the Joseph L. Murphy Fire Control Center and fire units in the area were dispatched to the scene of the blaze.

On arrival firemen found the house completely engulfed in flames. The origin of the fire was not immediately determined. It was reported no one was home at the time the blaze erupted.

The Smith family was provided temporary living quarters in a 3-room bungalow on the property of neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Drolet. The house is equipped with necessary facilities but it is insufficient to shelter the homeless family of seven.

Area residents and businesses desiring to aid the family with cash, clothing, furniture or other items they can use, are asked to leave donations at the Binnewater Chapel, or they may call Mrs. Drolet at 338-3669 and arrangements will be made to cart any heavy furniture or other items to the Smiths.

The family also is in need of an apartment or house, a neighbor said.

Plan Shawangunk Appeal

Representatives of People City have indicated that they will appeal a recent ruling by the Town of Shawangunk Planning Board denying approval of an application for construction of a low-income housing project near the Eastern New York Correctional Facility.

The developers had petitioned the State Supreme Court in an attempt to force Shawangunk planners to approve their application. But that appeal was turned down by the court because of a technicality. The planners then returned before the local Planning Board, resubmitted their application, and threatened to return to the Supreme Court if their request was denied.

One of the major reasons for the board's denial of the application is believed to be the proposed lot size of the 62-unit project. People City developers have proposed a one unit per two-thirds acre plan while the Planning Board has been adamant in its demand that a one-home, one-acre plan be adopted.

Planning Board members had indicated previously that they would have looked favorably on the plan had the lot sizes been increased. But reports indicated that such a proposal would not have been profitable to People City owners.

The lack of Water Department and Board of Health approval of the proposed housing project were also cited as reasons for the Planning Board's rejection of the application. The Planning Board also expressed concern that the plan had the lot sizes been increased. But reports indicated that such a proposal would not have been profitable to People City owners.

The two sides have been defending their respective stands for about one year, with each party periodically promising their demands.

People City representatives, however, have stated that their next step, now, will be to appeal the proceedings in the state court system.

The developer for People City is Harley Taylor, with Gerald Jacobowitz acting as the group's attorney. The Planning Board, with two of its members absent from the meeting, voted unanimously to reject the application.

Wandering Moose May Be Sick, Claims Wildlife Biologist

DELMAR, N. Y. (UPI)—The moose wandering in upstate New York near the Massachusetts line is apparently a very sick animal, according to a wildlife biologist.

C. W. Severinghaus of the Environmental Conservation Department game farm at Delmar said Thursday it was his opinion the moose was suffering from a brain disease usually known as "circling disease."

The disease is caused by a worm which is carried by snails and grubs, Severinghaus said. It does not cause animals to become belligerent, he noted, and the disease has not been known to affect humans.

Severinghaus said the lack of fear the moose has shown when approached by humans is a symptom of the middle stages of the disease which affects the building, slated for construction in 1974, would cost between three and four million dollars, could live through the winter.

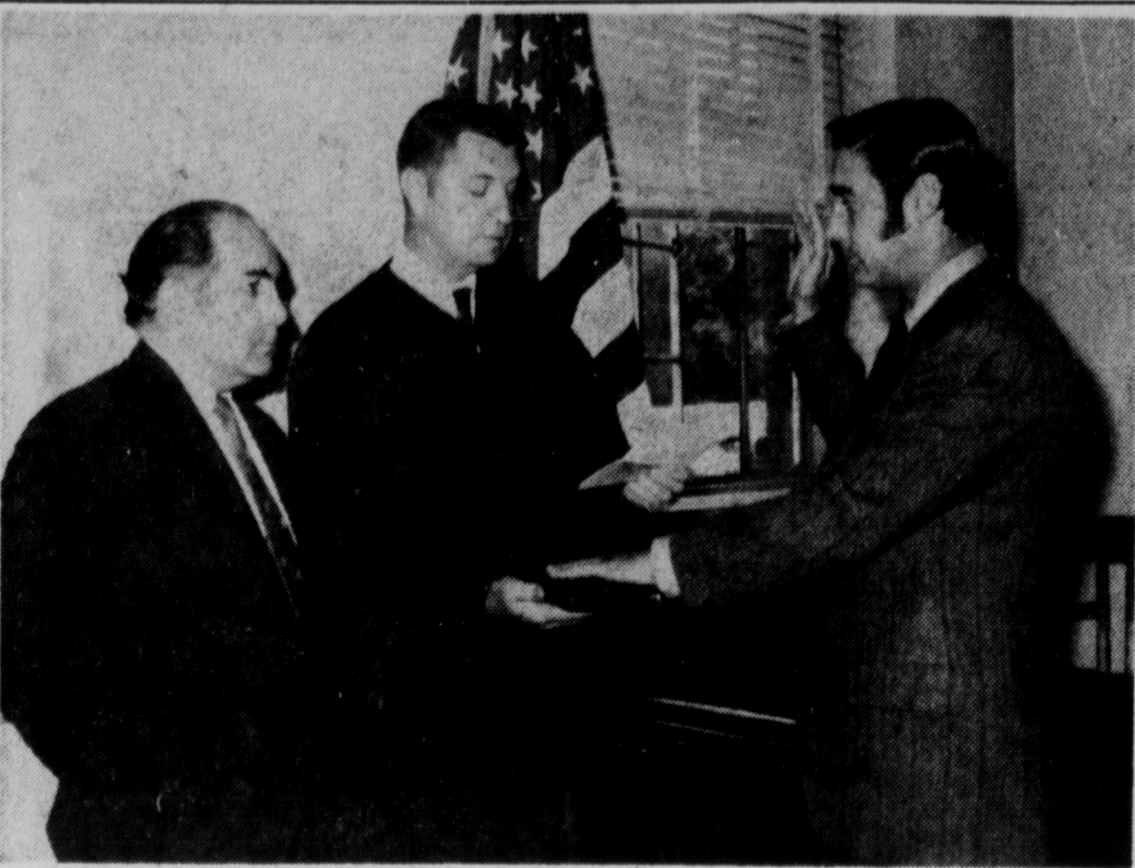

but not much longer and currently his greatest danger is from humans.

"The greatest hazard is the hunter or the nut who wants to shoot a moose just to brag about it," Severinghaus said. "There's also the possibility that the animal will walk onto a highway and be struck by a car."

The thousand-pound moose was first seen last week in his life as happily as possible.

Three Burglaries in City Homes

KINGSTON — Two young men who were surprised by a resident in the kitchen of his home Thursday afternoon, were sought by police for questioning in connection with a burglary at the man's home, according to Detective Lt. Charles McCullough, who said two other house burglaries are also under investigation.

Arthur Organtini of 139

Tammany Street told detectives that he returned to his home early yesterday afternoon and as he entered the kitchen he saw two white men about 20 years of age, standing in the room. When asked what they were doing the intruders said they were looking for a girl, and then they left.

Organtini later discovered $68 that included two $20 gold certificates, ten $2 bills, a $5 silver certificate and three $1 silver certificates missing from a desk. Also missing was a man's Bulova wrist watch valued at $75, and a .22 caliber Colt automatic pistol, police said.

Entry to the Organtini residence was made through an unlocked kitchen door.

Another burglary was reported Thursday afternoon by Edwin H. Sammons, 288 Clifton Avenue, who reported that on his return home he discovered that someone had broken the glass in the rear door and entered the house.

Investigation disclosed that a 5-band RCA radio valued at $125 and a 14 karat gold ladies wrist watch were missing.

McCullough also reported that detectives are investigating a complaint from Andrew Grier of 98 Stephan Street who discovered his home had been entered sometime yesterday. Entry was gained by breaking the glass in the front door and moving the latch. The house was ransacked. Four blank checks from the State of New York National Bank that had been signed by Grier's daughter, Sandra DiDonna were missing. A checkup was being made to determine whether anything else was taken.

Merchants have been advised to notify police if anyone attempts to cash the checks.

Half-Day of School Set in Port Jervis

PORT JERVIS, N.Y. (AP) — The 3,500 students in public schools in and around this southeastern New York city are to attend only a half-day of classes today due to a teachers' strike.

Supt. Arthur Venezia of the Port Jervis Enlarged City School district cancelled classes at the district's six schools before noon Thursday after teachers walked out following a breakdown in contract wage negotiations.

School board president Robert Hamilton said Thursday that today's classes would begin at the regular hour but last only half the day because most of the system's 160 teachers were on strike.

Hamilton said the board was considering seeking a court injunction against the strike, which was authorized two weeks ago by the striking Port Jervis Teachers Association. Two state conciliators attended a 10-hour negotiating session late Wednesday prior to the strike call.

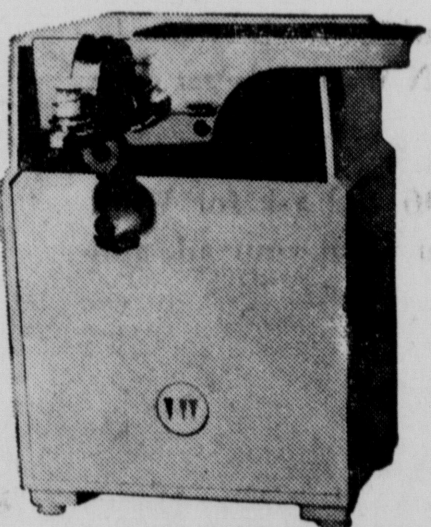

The strikers, according to PJTA president Wilson De Myer, have cut their salary demands and are only $200 from the school board offer.

A state fact-finder earlier suggested a $7,200 starting salary over last year's $6,800 minimum and the school board accepted it. But the teacher group requested negotiations based on the recommended wage scale.

Advise Top Court On Death Penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has advised the Supreme Court not to alter the states' death penalty procedures.

The Justice Department said in a brief late Thursday the Constitution requires neither standards to guide jurors nor separation of the sentencing process from the bulk of the trial.

These two changes are being urged upon the court in two test cases that could upset more than 550 death sentences.

The standard argument is that jurors now have unconstitutional, arbitrary authority to choose between a death sentence and a lesser penalty in capital cases, meaning pure chance often determines whether a convicted man is to live or die.

The separation argument is that defendants should be able to decline to take the witness stand during trial but should be able, if convicted, to offer evidence against a possible death penalty.

Both procedures, if adopted, could actually increase the chances of a death sentence, said Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold and Philip A. Lacombe, a special assistant to Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, in the brief requested by the court last June.

They said the nation is committed to trial by jury and to the assumption that juries act fairly, rationally and intelligently and reflect the conscience of the community.

"Neither this court nor any other has heretofore expressed anything but approval for the wisdom and fairness of entrusting flexible sentencing discretion to the trial juries in capital cases," they said.

As for adopting two-stage trials, as six states have done, the government lawyers said defendants always are under tactical pressures, such as whether or not to take the stand.

"The practical necessity of making difficult choices in defending a criminal charge, including a capital charge, does not establish that the procedures which occasion the election impermissibly burden the rights involved," the brief said.

The cases before the court, to be heard later this term, are appeals by James E. Crampton, a Toledo man convicted of slaying his wife, and Dennis McGautha, a Los Angeles man convicted of killing a store owner.

The Justice Department lawyers said jurors are reluctant to impose death sentences. This could change, they said, if states were to enumerate by law the factors jurors were to consider as reasons for a death sentence.

Similarly, the government brief said, opening trials to special penalty evidence often produces details that work against the defendant instead of for him.

GNP Climbs, Under Expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the off-year election less than three weeks away, the Nixon administration has received new economic data that could be handy in countering campaign charges that the nation is headed for a recession.

But Democrats, too, got what could be political ammunition from other major economic indicators announced Thursday. While the Gross National Product, which measures the market value of the nation's total output in goods and services, climbed at a 6 per cent annual rate during the July-September period, industrial production fell sharply, by 1.7 per cent, during September.

The GNP rise represented

moderately good political news for the administration. It indicated perhaps the first stages of recovery from the economic stagnation that began a year ago.

Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said "It is quite clear that the economy is on the threshold and probably in the early stages of substantial and vigorous expansion." In talking with newsmen, McCracken said, "I think the evidence is clear, that the rate of inflation has decelerated significantly."

But the climb wasn't as high as the administration had hoped. And because of the auto workers' strike, the inflation rate kept going up, to an annual rate of 4.4 per cent for the three-month period compared with 4.3 per cent for the previous quarter.

The Commerce Department said GNP for the third quarter totaled $985.2 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up $14.1 billion from the second-quarter figure.

The "real" GNP—which measures the nation's output without inflation—rose 1.4 per cent to $924.3 billion. The "real" GNP measures the value of goods and services produced during the three months in terms of 1958 dollars.

The United Auto Workers strike against General Motors held back the GNP again significantly. A Commerce Department analyst said without the strike the rise would have been 6.7 per cent and the increase in actual output would have been about 2.5 per cent. In addition, he said, the inflation rate would have dropped to 4.2 per cent.

The strike's impact on the September industrial production index was dramatic. It fell to 166 per cent of the 1957-1959 average, the lowest figure in two years.

The Federal Reserve Board said the index was down from the 168.9 per cent registered in August and 4.9 per cent below the peak of July 1969.

The strike accounted for two-thirds of the decline, the board said, with the remainder reflecting decreases in production of consumer goods other than autos, business and defense equipment, and other materials.

Spiro Defends LBJ and Raps Hubert

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew defended former President Lyndon B. Johnson Thursday against what Agnew called a "degrading" attack by 1968 Democratic presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey.

Agnew called Humphrey "The political turncoat of the year" for saying Johnson was "paranoid" about the Vietnam War.

The vice president, campaigning in Central Florida for Gov. Claude Kirk, seeking re-election, and Congressman William Cramer, seeking a U.S. Senate seat, later addressed a rally at Orlando. He scheduled a news conference today at the Bay Hill Country Club at Windermere, where he will spend the weekend golfing.

Agnew departed from his prepared text at Jacksonville to chastize Humphrey, who was Johnson's vice president.

Agnew said he had read Humphrey's interview (in which he viciously attacks a man without The New York Times Sunday whom he would have never was quoted as saying one reason he failed to take a firm stand for an end to the Vietnam War at the 1968 Democratic convention was that "I had a president who was absolutely paranoid about the war."

"I know President Johnson and I respect him," Agnew said. "He was not paranoid about the war. When Mr. Humphrey says that in 1970, he excerpts from an interview (in which he viciously attacks a man without The New York Times Sunday whom he would have never been vice president of the United States or a presidential candidate."

At the Orlando rally, Agnew compared Kirk to himself. He recalled the governor's Jacksonville confrontation with black militant leader H. Rap Brown several years ago.

"It took guts and it took flare," Agnew said, "and if any politician tells you Claude Kirk is a little on the colorful side, take it from one who knows: Many a time a man with serious goals has to use colorful language and dramatic actions to get important messages through the media to the people."

Agency Rejected On Meat Checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has turned down a task force recommendation that a new consumer agency be set up in the Agriculture Department to handle meat and poultry inspection.

The inspection programs now are built into what the task force calls the "complex organization" of the department's Consumer and Marketing Service. The report says inspection is too big a job for the agency.

"There is an inherent difference in the nature of marketing and regulatory programs which creates an internal administrative conflict," the report said.

"Further, consumer protection is so large and has such complex problems that it needs a full-time administrator."

Therefore, the task force concluded, a new agency called the Food Inspection Service should be established "at the earliest practicable date."

Assistant Secretary Richard E. Lyng, however, rejected the proposal. In a letter to Dr. Clayton Yeutter, administrator of C&MS, Lyng said USDA had considered a new agency but, "It is our intention to continue meat and poultry inspection within C&MS."

The report also recommended that meat and poultry inspection services be continued as one function. Lyng said the department concurred.

The report and Lyng's reply were made public Thursday upon the request of newsmen. The report had been under wraps since last week but had been circulated privately to trade sources.

The report cited some of the problems in administering the inspection program.

Basic Party Realignment

The vote next month is already being hailed as a test of the expert judgment that the United States is undergoing a historic political shift, a change of party alignment for the first time since Franklin D. Roosevelt formed the coalition that lasted, with three breaks, for 40 years. Those breaks were the two elections of Dwight D. Eisenhower and the most recent one of Richard M. Nixon.

The experts believe that the new issues of concern over youth, crime, drugs and campus disorders, are replacing the economic issues that shaped the long run of political successes of the New Deal and its variants. The battleground is permissiveness and radical liberalism against control and conservatism. The eventual alignment would be liberal against conservative. Since Federalist-Whig days, the regrouping of parties has been part of this country's history.

One proof that this thinking is shared in high places is the attack Vice President Agnew has been making on such liberal Senators as Charles E. Goodell of New York, a Republican, and Albert Gore of Tennessee, a Democrat, both of whom Agnew called radical liberals. He has also promised to pay his respects to a number of other liberal senators, especially J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

However, Agnew has said that the pride of American politics is that the two major parties have room for men of differing attitudes. His own distinction is whether and how well they have supported the President. This may be a valid political test; it is not necessarily proof of a new party alignment. A new political alignment, like Britain's, might make it easier for some voters to choose their loyalties. It may be coming here. But 1970 is too soon for a sure test.

Pornography Laws

The majority of the Commission on Obscenity and Pornography has concluded that what adults wish to see and read should be their own choice without interference by government. But let us consider what it would mean if, as the majority recommends, federal and states laws forbidding the importation, showing or selling of erotica were repealed.

As the three dissenting commissioners saw it, the purpose of anti-obscenity laws is to protect the public, not individual morality, and never was based on what the majority called the impossible task of proving specific harmful effects. As with liquor and cigarettes, the child reacts by example. He will seek out smut if his parents show that they enjoy it.

Apparently, Congress doesn't think much of the commission's report. Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield struck a common note when he said he disagreed that pornography did adults no harm. He said that we have been pretty free with permissiveness already. Vice President Agnew found himself speaking for a majority of Congress when he disavowed the report as not representative of the thinking of the Nixon Administration and reminded people that the commission was appointed by President Johnson.

From all this, we can be pretty sure there will be no new laws carrying out the commission's recommendations. But the report will encourage purveyors of smut to more boldness, and to depend for vindication on the courts, where they have had considerable encouragement in recent years.

"Sorry, sir—looks like no obscene mail today!"

A Beginning

David Lawrence Says Soviet, Red China Show Their Nuclear Strength

WASHINGTON — As if something were needed to emphasize the grim wave of pessimism about the future of world peace, the Soviet Union and Red China — on the same day that the United Nations was beginning to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary — carried out big nuclear tests.

The Russians exploded underground a nuclear device almost five times stronger than the largest underground charge ever set off in the United States. Red China, which has never signed the treaty banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere, detonated a bomb equivalent to a force of about three million tons of TNT. It is the first Chinese test detected this year by the Atomic Energy Commission.

The two major Communist nations are thus deliberately demonstrating their nuclear strength at a time when friction in the Middle East and Southeast Asia is a big worry to the world. Neither Communist China nor the Soviet Union, which has professed to be anxious to work toward a limitation of strategic armament, is manifesting an interest in the making of peace or the prevention of war.

Red China has given no indication of a willingness to use its influence with North Vietnam to bring about a settlement in Indo-China.

Early last month it was assumed that the Soviet premier would come to New York City to participate in the commemoration of the United Nations anniversary and perhaps have talks with President Nixon. Instead, he is sending his foreign minister to attend the function.

So the sessions to be held in connection with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the United Nations and the meetings of the heads of state are not expected to be anything more than ceremonial affairs. The problem of Indo-China and the acute situation in the Middle East are both being avoided.

Meanwhile, a next-door neighbor of the United States — Canada — has established full diplomatic relations with Communist China and hopes to serve as a "bridge" between the Asian nation and other countries, especially the United States. Canada, of course, has a vital interest in trade with Red China, which is one of the largest customers for Canadian wheat. It is, in fact, ranked high among Canada's export buyers.

Canada takes the position that it is recognizing the Peking Regime as the sole legal government of China, without endorsing or challenging Peking's claim to Formosa as Chinese territory. There have been indications that the United States might be willing some day to enter into relations with Peking, but this would not necessarily change the attitude of America toward its ally, the Nationalist Government on Formosa. It has been suggested by various proponents of compromise on admission of Red China to the United Nations that each

There have been indications that the United States might be willing some day to enter into relations with Peking, but this would not necessarily change the attitude of America toward its ally, the Nationalist Government on Formosa. It has been suggested by various proponents of compromise on admission of Red China to the United Nations that each government be given representation in the U.N. as an independent entity. The more the Red Chinese strengthen their position as a nuclear power, the more realistic it is for the other countries of the world to seek a basis of understanding so as to avoid open hostilities.

The purpose of the current talks between the United States and Russia is to get an agreement limiting strategic armaments as a supplement to the ban on the spread of nuclear weapons. But unless some sense or responsibility is exercised by the nations that now have nuclear power, it is likely that the other countries will not be satisfied and will want to have nuclear weapons of their own. These are among the troublesome questions that are certain to be factors in the talks on arms limitation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

It is significant that a group of 18 western nations has submitted a resolution in the U.N. which would require that in order for Red China to be admitted, a two-thirds vote of the General Assembly will be necessary. This clearly indicates that a controversy will arise over Red China's admission and that, if a compromise is reached, it will be on the basis of according a separate status to Red China and Nationalist China. The real problem will come if any effort is made to amend the charter to give Red China the permanent seat on the Security Council which Nationalist China now holds.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

Men who enjoy sports are misunderstood by their wives. I have spent a decade explaining a first down to my wife and she still equates it with loss of virtue. My excitement over football, boxing and golf moves her not. I suspect she works hard to misunderstand sports.

Occasionally, when Chris Dundee and Harold Conrad stage a boxing match, Kelly will not only attend, watching men batter each other senseless, but will stand up, the face red with hostility, the neck sinews engorged, and scream "Kill him! Kill him!" On the way home, she denies she did it.

Mr. Louis Harris, who conducts polls, recently published a canvass of sports and found that football now leads baseball, 30 per cent to 27 per cent. This is hardly surprising because the former "American pastime" is a drag. It is played slowly, and sometimes the watching fans wonder if that guy on the mound is ever going to conclude his meditations and throw the ball.

Casey Stengel put it in correct perspective when he said: "It used to be fun and fast. I played third and, with nobody on first, if a ball came my way I often tossed it to second just to surprise the second baseman and keep him on his toes. He had to whirl and throw to first to catch the runner by a half step. Those days are gone."

"Today, if you pull a joke like that, you're risking the ankles, knees and throwing arms of a million collars worth of infield players." Once upon a time, Brooklyn fans went to Ebbets Field for the pure joy of watching Babe Herman misjudge a fly ball into a two-base hit.

He is still the only right fielder who was ever flattened by a baseball hitting him in the back of the head. It caromed off a corrugated tin fence and stretched him on the grass.

Football is a throw-back to the gladiators of Rome. It's a contact sport in which every player has a strategic assignment on every play. In the stands are 60,000 coaches who know exactly what the quarterback should do, and they can vent their high-pitched joy or their roaring condemnation at will.

My mother attended basketball games from 1899 onward, when the game was new, but I suspect that she was more interested in the dance that was held in the gymnasium after the game than in the game itself. Within me there is a blind spot for basketball. I cannot understand anything that can be won by a score of 104 to 102, played by mutants who are 7 feet, 13 inches tall.

And yet, according to Mr. Harris, basketball comes in third with 11 per cent popularity. Auto racing is fourth, with 10 per cent, but this is for sadists. They buy tickets, not to watch incredible speed on wheels, but to stand gasping with pleasure as an automobile goes into a spin on a turn and whirled over end in flames.

Bowling comes in fifth with 3 per cent, and this is a profound surprise, because, to the fan, it is a participating sport. Considering the vast number of lanes America has, I thought at least a third of the adults enjoyed throwing a ball down an alley, hoping to see ten pins tumble in a roar of falling wood.

Golf is the favorite of only 3 per cent of the people. The average cost per round — about $10 for greens fees and cart — may account for the low estate of hitting an inoffensive little white ball with a big club. I love golf with a passion which only Nick Borsani, my pro, understands. However, no matter how many days a week I go out, Mr. B. can't bear to watch because he knows that I am not going to play golf, the course is going to play me.

I have given up trying to get out of a trap at the green with a five wood and now use a putter. This makes every par four an easy eight. Boxing gets 2 per cent of the buffs as a favorite sport, but it has fallen on evil days because we are in the age of the fighter who can think. Intelligence in a fighter is cranial cancer. It destroys the instinct to kill and tells him when to lie down and take the horizontal way out.

There are no Harry Grebs, Benny Leonard, Dempseys, Brown Bombers or Lou Tenders anymore. Frazier is the only man I've seen who is an animal in the ring. But who's fit to fight him? Mrs. John Mitchell is the only batter in sight.

Horse racing, hockey and tennis complete the roster of the Harris report, rating 2 per cent each. The first is staged for making unearned money, the second is a skull splitter. Tennis is cardiac ballet, great if you like to smell your own sweat.

In sports, I'm a spectator. My pleasure is watching other men beat each other to death. My grandson, Jim Bishop Frechette, plays football in a 95-pound league. His father played too. But not Grandpa. Never...

Jack Anderson Says

Senator Hruska on Both Sides of Debate on Nudity

WASHINGTON — When Senator Roman Hruska preaches about the evils of violence and pornography, he knows whereof he speaks. He is a partner in a movie chain that has recently featured skin flicks such as "Girl on a Chain Gang" and violence such as "The Blood Drinker."

The pious Nebraska has sponsored numerous bills against smut and violence. Only last week he wrote President Nixon that he was "impelled by due respect for common decency and good morals" to disagree with the liberal findings of the Commission on Obscenity and Pornography.

But Hruska's "common decency and good morals" apparently do not "impel" him when his pocketbook is affected. He is secretary and director of Douglas Theater Company which owns drive-ins and theaters in Omaha, Lincoln and Carter Lake, Iowa.

Until the Omaha City Council cracked down, Hruska's chain featured such classics as "Shanty Tramp," with a titillating teaser in its advertisements: "sorry, because of the abnormal nature of this film, we cannot use any photos in advertisements."

The chain, which has Hruska's wife, Virginia, as another director, displayed "White Slave Ship" only this year. In the recent past, it showed "The Love-Ins" ("Take a trip into the psychedelic world of the hippies"), "The Wild and the Willing" ("They broke every speed limit in a parked car") and "Two Weeks in September," featuring a near nude woman.

Blood and Sex
Hruska loudly denounces violence, but his denunciations end at the ticket office. Last year, for example, one of his Omaha drive-ins showed "Blood-o-rama," a quadruple feature: "The Bad, the Ugly, the Blood Drinker, the Blood Cudgel."

Parents near one of the Senator's drive-ins complained about the legislator's dreadful movies. They tried to get the Omaha obscenity ordinance amended. But Hruska ska and other Omaha theater owners fought it with guile and gusto, winning a compromise law.

The movies lately have improved their fare. For example, one showed "Easy Rider," a superb film which, however, tends to glorify the hippie youths whom Hruska likes to berate.

Douglas Theater Company, incorporated in 1961, reportedly employs about 70 persons. Hruska, a half owner, has been a partner in Douglas and a predecessor firm for 15 years.

Reached in Omaha where he is busily campaigning for re-election, Hruska said: "We are the only group in the area that does not show X-rated films. We'll match our operation with anyone."

Asked how he rated "A Bucket of Blood," Hruska said he did "not want to go into the judging of pictures," but pointed out that his theaters had also shown "Romeo and Juliet."

The Senator wouldn't say how much he gets out of Douglas Theaters, except that it is "making a profit." Asked whether he would make a public accounting, the crusader for public morality said: "Heavens no! It's none of the public's business as long as there is no conflict of interest."

Agnew in Trouble
Spiro Agnew's lascivious crack, comparing Sen. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., to Christine Jorgenson, was a bit too raw for Republican Senators to swallow.

It caused quiet dismay on the GOP side of the Senate. Liberals and conservatives alike agreed that the Vice President had finally gone beyond the bounds of political ethics and good taste.

In the privacy of the Republican cloakrooms, such staunch conservatives as Arizona's Paul Fannin and Colorado's Peter Dominick were overheard to suggest that the President should put a muzzle on Agnew. Similar remarks were made by Pennsylvania's Hugh Scott, Kentucky's Marlow Cook and others.

A Senate commandment, nowhere recorded but as binding as if it were chiseled on stone, forbids Senators of the same party from campaigning against one another. This is considered a minimal courtesy to preserve party harmony.

As the Senate's presiding officer, the Vice President is accepted as an honorary member of the club. Agnew, therefore, is expected to comply with the traditions.

His attacks upon a bonafide Republican Senator caused the others to squirm uncomfortably, but they gave Agnew a little latitude because of his White House campaign assignment. When he called Goodell "the Christine Jorgenson of the Republican Party," however, Spiro alienated every Senator on the GOP side.

What concerns them even more than Agnew's disregard for the amenities is that he might be unleashed against any one of them.

The reason he gave for lashing out against Goodell was the New York Senator's failure to support the President. Yet some Senate conservatives, such as Arizona's Barry Goldwater and South Carolina's Strom Thurmond, have gone against the White House more often than has Goodell.

Upon some occasion or other, every GOP Senator has strayed from the reservations. This has raised the unspoken question: Who else, having displeased the White House, will get the Goodell treatment?

Soviet diplomats, in their cocktail conversations with American officials, have tried to belittle the Middle East truce violations. Most of the missile movements, the Soviets have insisted, were no more than shifts from one place to another within the truce zone. They also have confided that some of the missiles were actually plastic decoys. The decision to renew military aid to Greece was made personally by President Nixon. He has sought to pressure the Greek military government into adopting democratic reforms.

The crisis in Jordan, however, persuaded him that he couldn't afford to wait any longer for the reforms. He decided that Greece was essential as a military ally in the Mediterranean.

Race, Religion May Determine Battle for N. Y. Governorship

By CHARLES DUMAS

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP)—Gov. Rockefeller and Arthur Goldberg won't admit it, but the hard fact is that there's much discussion within their rival camps about the religious and ethnic undercurrents of their battle for the governorship.

The accepted protocol in such situations is for the candidates and their associates to deplore publicly any suggestion that religion or nationality should influence the outcome of an election.

Reporters who presume to raise this question in such public settings as, say, a news conference are likely to be treated as indelicate louts. Yet, discourse on the same subject often is welcomed in private.

Politicians will tell you that, when they enter into discussion of the Rockefeller-Goldberg contest, the religion-race issue almost invariably is raised.

"I can't remember any state election where this has been such a factor," an upstate Democratic county chairman confided.

What the political pros are talked about—and, more important, what they say the voters are talking to them about—is the "unbalance" of the Democratic state ticket that Goldberg heads.

Before the advent of the state-wide primary law, state tickets were forged at party conventions, and the leaders took care to strike a nice balance among the geographical, religious and ethnic backgrounds of their candidates.

The GOP ticket, unchanged in the primary, presents such a balance. It offers two Protestants, two Catholics and a Jew, with residences ranging from Manhattan to Buffalo.

Four of the five places on the Democratic ticket were contested in the primary, however, and the balloting produced a ticket of four Jews and a Negro Catholic, four of whom either live or work in New York City. The fifth is from suburban Westchester.

Rockefeller has criticized the "unbalance" of the Democratic ticket but has limited his comments to the geographical factor.

At the same time, Rockefeller associates have speculated hopefully that the Democrats will have difficulty selling the ticket to an upstate electorate comprised largely of Protestants and Catholics.

In the western part of the state, a Democratic leader conceded ruefully that otherwise faithful voters were turning up their noses at a ticket headed by a Jew—Goldberg—and a Negro—Harlem's State Sen. Basil A. Paterson, the candidate for lieutenant governor.

It has been reported, for example, that Buffalo's substantial Polish-American community is drifting toward Rockefeller for the first time. Italian-Americans in the Syracuse area are said to be doing the same.

Politicians in both parties have been prone to repeating supposedly humorous but bigoted references to the ticket's ethnic makeup, usually explaining hastily that they are not prejudiced themselves.

And some like to point out that, if the Democrats should sweep this election, seven of the state's eight highest offices would be held by men of the Jewish faith. The rundown:

Governor—Goldberg; Comptroller—Arthur Levitt; Attorney General—Adam Walinsky; the incumbent Republican, Louis J. Lefkowitz also is Jewish; Speaker of the Assembly—Stanley Steingut; Senate Majority Leader—Joseph Zaretzki; U. S. Senators—Richard L. Ottinger, plus Republican incumbent Jacob K. Javits, not running this year.

But many Goldberg adherents believe his Jewishness is a major asset—that he will cut deeply into the support that Rockefeller has enjoyed among the state's Jewish voters. And they expect Paterson will motivate black voters, who ordinarily do not register or vote in high proportion.

A recent newspaper survey indicated that, of a potential registered electorate of 6.2 million voters statewide, about 1.3 million are Jews and about a half million are Negroes. The remaining 4.4 million is almost evenly divided between white Protestants and Roman Catholics.

In the end, political theorists in both camps say they expect most people to vote along party or ideological lines. But they continue to speculate that enough people will be influenced by race or religion to determine the final result.

Hands Off: Nixon, Tito Warn Soviet

By LEON DENNEN

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (NEA) — There was more agreement between President Tito and President Nixon when they met in Yugoslavia than was revealed in their joint statement.

Tito and Nixon are at opposite poles in their political ideologies and/or social and economic views. Yet they fully agreed that Moscow's imperialist policy in East Europe and the Middle East and Russia's continued naval expansion in the Mediterranean is a growing threat to world peace.

The Tito-Nixon official statement was deliberately vague, as diplomatic communiques usually are. But Yugoslavs read it as an expression of American backing for the independence of their Balkan country and its 20 million people of diverse nationalities and religions.

It was a joint message to Moscow that my country is off limits," an elated Yugoslav diplomat told this writer. "It was a clear warning that Yugoslavia is not a Brezhnev doctrine country."

He was referring to Moscow's policy that justifies Russian armed intervention where, in the Kremlin's view, communist is imperiled.

According to the diplomat, the warning came at a crucial moment in Yugoslavia's existence as an independent Communist state. Tito attached so much importance to his meeting with Nixon that he canceled plans to attend the funeral of his closest friend in the Arab world, Egypt's President Nasser.

Yugoslavia was the first Communist country to defy Moscow and challenge the Kremlin's supremacy. Since 1948, despite repeated threats on his life, Tito has endeavored to create a more moderate Marxist-Leninist state with a "human face."

However, ever since the Russians invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968 and proclaimed the "Brezhnev doctrine," Yugoslavia has been a seething political volcano.

Tito condemned the invasion and, anticipating a Soviet attack, set about streamlining Yugoslavia's defenses. But many of his army officers still cherish nostalgia for Russian-style communism. Discredited and disgruntled politicians like Aleksander Rankovic, former chief of the secret police, continue to undermine Belgrade's anti-Russian regime with Moscow's help.

Buckley-Gnat in Ottinger Cap

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA Washington Correspondent
NEW YORK (NEA) — Walk along upper Manhattan streets with Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, and you'll discover that the kind of costly television blitz that got him the nomination last June has its limits.

This day he is out with a new backer, former Mayor Robert Wagner. Nearly everybody recognizes Wagner, but only about one in every five to 10 persons registers on Ottinger until he states his name.

It has to be remembered that interest in the race last spring was not high, and that only 26 per cent of New York's dominant Democratic electorate voted in the June primary.

Ottinger is obviously attractive though low key, as third-party candidate James Buckley is in a different way. It would be hard for anyone to get mad at Ottinger, but conversely he doesn't stir any great fires, either.

Plainly his strategists (who say so privately) are concerned over Buckley's effort to portray Ottinger and incumbent GOP Sen. Charles Goodell as look-alikes in opposition to the Vietnam war. They have reason to fear a burst of sympathy for Goodell from among Agnew-hating liberals, for Ottinger's leadership strength has a shallow feel to it.

The tactic decided upon to separate Ottinger from Goodell is for the Democrat to portray his controversial GOP adversary as "wrong on economics" and somewhat indifferent to the country's social needs.

I eavesdropped on many chats Ottinger had with voters and television interviewers on a morning street walk. No matter what the question, he always steered things around so he could blame Goodell for high bread prices and mounting unemployment.

Ottinger has done so much of this, a lot of it on television in joint appearances with his opponents, that he already has come under some liberal fire as being "too programmed" as well as being expensively "packaged" by his television experts.

Goodell, free-wheeling, coming up on the outside with every thing to gain and little to lose, has sounded tougher, more driving, more persuasive to those liberals who like the candidate's language to be uncompromising.

If this impression of Goodell gains fresh force, and if Vice President Agnew's assaults help him spruce up his martyr's robes, Ottinger could be dragged down to the trouble level.

Waiting there to pick him off is Buckley, who does not at all fit the liberal stereotype of a "right-wing conservative" which the doctrinaire leftists keep pasted on their walls.

The truth is that to the visitor's ear Buckley sounds considerably more flexible and less programmed than Ottinger and a good deal less abrasive than the hard-scrambling Goodell.

It stuns Buckley some to be told it, but his position on Medicare, welfare, education and other large social matters are so moderate that 20 years ago he could have passed for at least a fringe New Dealer. He wanted to take on Goodell in a Republican primary, but his Connecticut voting residency barred the try.

Indications are he will pull heavily among conservative Republicans and Democrats, and could run very well in such usual GOP strongholds as New York City's suburban counties of Nassau, Suffolk, Westchester, etc. But to win he needs to more than double the 1.1 million vote he got against Sen. Jacob Javits in 1968, and to see Ottinger chopped down.

That the soft-spoken Buckley has a genuine shot at winning is not entirely due to Goodell's antiwar stance and his other issue positions displeasing to Republicans and others from the White House down.

Testimony is ample that Goodell consistently neglected his party fences, that sometimes (as in Binghamton) he would visit a Liberal party leader while ignoring the Republican county chairman. Gov. Rockefeller, good party soldier, snuffed out open organization opposition to Goodell, but many leaders quietly work for Buckley. Before Agnew came along Goodell had another potent enemy—himself.

Faith in Humanity Revived
Editor, The Freeman

Due to the sudden accidental death of my brother John Chodaba, of 15 Louis Avenue, Saugerties, N.Y., we wish to express our sincere thanks and gratitude to many wonderful neighbors in the Simmons Park area who had labored through the three days and supplied all that was necessary to ease the burden of the grief-stricken family. In this day of hatred and bitterness it is heart-warming to see such kindness expressed in so many deeds and it should not go by unnoticed.

Personally, it had renewed my faith in humanity, and my parents and I will be forever grateful to them.

Voice of Democracy
Editor, The Freeman

My congratulations to Joyce Schirick Post 1386 for the splendid job they are doing to encourage the 10th, 11th and 12th grade students of our schools to enter into the voice of Democracy Scholarship Program.

The theme, "Freedom — Our Heritage" — gives our young people food for thought. Today, so many of our fellow Americans take their freedom for granted because they were born here. For well over a century, nationalism in this country was so strong there was very little disloyalty to our country, our flag or our ideals. Without a second thought, a good American would give his life for his country. In these days of strife and world unrest, disloyalties and riots in our country, our freedom should be guarded like a precious jewel lest we lose it forever.

Their sponsorship of this program will make our young students aware of their responsibilities and duties as Americans and will help advance the principles and ideals upon which our great country was founded and built.

Sincerely,
ALBERT SPADA

Obstruction Is Main Issue
Editor, The Freeman

Obstruction — that's the main issue in this Senatorial election. Liberals can't bear to see Nixon clean up the messes that years of liberalism have created. The Congress of Ottinger and Goodell is controlled by Democrats, whose program is simply "Stop Nixon."

The president's attempts to squelch inflation by eliminating deficit spending was vetoed by Ottinger and the Democrat Congress. Running the country in the red has been the rule during Congressman Ottinger's years in Washington and inflation has been the result. Inflation has pushed up the costs of schools and of local government. Property taxes have been forced up to pay for these increases. Ottinger Democrats have approved deficits to subsidize the food industry and tear down housing. Deficits for campuses and a seaway to the Ozarks. Inflation is a hidden tax and the liberals don't care to see President Nixon get credit for ending it.

Congressman Ottinger supported the President on Vietnam — when the President was Johnson. Ottinger applauded Johnson's speech justifying the first bombing of North Vietnam. In 1965 he criticized anti-war demonstrators for undermining Johnson's position. In 1966 he said President Johnson was making a supreme effort toward a meaningful and honorable peace. On June 22, 1967, as our troop commitment topped a half million, he said, "I have always been and will continue to be firmly against unilateral withdrawal." But, of course, times have changed. In January 1969 a Republican moved into the White House. With that Ottinger dropped his support. On December 2, 1969, he voted no support for President Nixon in his efforts to negotiate a just peace in Vietnam which upheld the principle that the people of South Vietnam are entitled to choose their own government by means of free elections.

America's problems are too urgent to take second place to politics. The President needs our support. Jim Buckley will put America first and that, I believe, is what New York voters want their Senators to do.

Very truly yours,

$600 for Transcript
Editor, The Freeman

About $600 is the quoted cost for making a trial transcript — so states an article in the Times Herald Record of Wednesday, Oct. 7, which deals with the matter entitled "Ellenville must pay for indigent's trial transcripts." A transcript is (dictionary definition) — a written or printed copy of records. In this case it consists of the minutes of a trial which took place in the village of Ellenville, presided over by Justice Ronald W. Elias.

Does it mean that it costs around $600 of taxpayers money to accomplish making one transcript? How many people had to be employed to make this $600 transcript? What was their hourly rate of pay? How much and what kind of paper was needed, and at what price? How many hours of labor went into the making of this transcript task? We assume that lawyer fees are not contained in this $600, since the newspaper story states that this sum is for the making of a transcript.

Please enlighten us, the weary, unfairly overtaxed taxpayers — what are we paying for? Who is getting the lions share of tax money allotted to cost of transcript records? Unless citizens know the breakdown of all expenses involved in making a transcript, we can conclude only that somewhere along the line, judges or justices and maybe a few of the lesser officials are 'sitting pretty' on the gravy train, of which the tracks are tied with six hundred (or more) dollars transcript record fees. Is this just one more reason why citizens are overtaxed? Is this another example of key officials fleecing the taxpayer public? Mr. & Mrs. David F. Marshall

Typhoon Toll Tops 300, One of Worst in Century

NAGA, Philippines (AP) — Government officials confirmed today that more than 300 persons were killed and hundreds more feared dead in one of the worst typhoons to hit the Philippine Islands this century.

Officials estimated at least 300,000 persons were homeless and that damage ran into millions of dollars.

The devastating storm slammed in from the Pacific Ocean Tuesday with winds up to 150 miles an hour.

President Ferdinand Marcos has declared a state of disaster in Southern Luzon.

It was still impossible for officials to determine the total amount of death and destruction because some of the hardest hit sections remained isolated and could be surveyed only from the air.

The typhoon's effects were felt over a 500-mile-long stretch, and transports ferried tons of rice, canned foods and medical supplies to Naga for distribution.

Naga, 200 miles southeast of Manila, was severely hit and large residential sections on the edge of the city remained under water.

Reported In Good Condition

TOWN OF SAUGERTIES — George Legg, 18, of Route 4, Box 95, this township, who was injured in a mishap at his home, today was reported in good condition at Albany Medical Center Hospital, according to his mother, Mrs. Kenneth Legg.

Mrs. Legg said her son was putting powder from a shotgun shell with tissue paper into a homemade cannon when the powder exploded, Monday afternoon. The youth suffered the loss of his left thumb and the tip of his index finger.

The boy's mother denied a previous report that he was hitting the cannon that had three blasting caps in it with a hammer at the time he was injured. She also denied that the youth was injured in a similar accident with the cannon last year.

REAL FISH STORY — Most everyone has heard their share of fisherman's tales, but this one tops most. It seems that Ollis Andrews of Wendell, N. C., has always wanted to have his very own pet bass in his lake, well he does. As a matter of fact Ollis has been hand feeding this large-mouth bass for some eight years. It all started when he noticed that the bass hit at bait in the water close to his hand. Ollis decided if he would come that close he might eat out of his hand . . . he did and still does. ## Young Victims

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP) — More persons in the 15 to 24 age group than in any other ten-year age bracket were killed in accidents in upstate New York between April 1 and June 30 of this year, State Health Commissioner Hollis S. Ingraham reports.

The death toll for the 15 to 24-year-olds was 246. Of that number, 175 died as the result of motor vehicle accidents.

25 Kent State Indictments, Jury Absolves Guard Action

RAVENNA, Ohio (UPI)—A special state grand jury which investigated the fatal shootings of four Kent State University students by Ohio National Guardsmen today returned 25 indictments on 43 offenses. No guardsmen were indicted.

The grand jury ruled the National Guard acted in self defense when it fired into a group of students on the Kent State campus last May 4.

Those indicted were not identified. A spokesman said they would not be identified until they were placed under arrest.

The grand jury said the groups of students at the campus rally quickly "degenerated into a riotous mob" when ordered by a Kent State University policeman to disperse.

"It is obvious that if the order to disperse had been heeded, there would not have been the consequences of that fateful day," the report said.

"Those who acted as participants and agitators are guilty of deliberate, criminal conduct. Those who were present as cheerleaders and onlookers, while not liable for criminal acts, must morally assume a part of the responsibility for what occurred."

The report was emphatic that the guard fired in self defense when the students were killed and wounded.

"We find . . . that those members of the National Guard who were present on the hill adjacent to Taylor Hall on May 4, 1970, fired their weapons in the honest and sincere belief and under circumstances which would have logically caused them to believe that they would suffer serious bodily injury had they not done so."

"They are not, therefore, subject to criminal prosecution under the laws of this state, for any death or injury resulting therefrom."

The report said 58 guardsmen were struck by rocks and other objects hurled at them as they moved in formation in the vicinity of the group of students.

"Whatever may have been in the minds of those who harassed and otherwise taunted the National Guard, it is clear that from the time the guard reached the practice football field, they were on the defensive and had every reason to be concerned for their own defense," the report said.

The panel said the fact that it officers.

U.S. Communist Party To Protest for Angela

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Communist Party of the U.S.A., confirming that Angela Davis has been a party member for years, called a rally in front of Governor Rockefeller's office today to demand he not allow her extradition to California on murder and kidnap charges.

Party General Secretary Gus Hall called the charges against the black militant philosophy instructor a fraud and a frameup, and urged a movement of "national proportions" to free the 26-year-old revolutionary.

"She is guilty of no crime

Students Rob, Beat Subway Passengers

NEW YORK (UPI)—About 200 students robbed and beat passengers on a southbound subway under Manhattan Thursday afternoon.

The students, believed to be from George Washington High School and Public School 143, got on the train at noontime.

Outside the 181st Street station they pulled the emergency cord and terrorized the passengers while the train was stopped.

Some were threatened at knifepoint. One woman, Rose Gresham, 52, was taken to a hospital and released. Her watch had been stolen and her nose punched.

Police reported only five complaints of robbery, but detectives said property was found later in the 10 cars and along the tracks. Train windows also were smashed.

Police conducted a lineup of students in the station, but none of the victims could identify his attacker and no arrests were made.

Under California law an accomplice before a slaying is just as guilty as the actual slayer.

Miss Davis is being held without bail in the Women's House of Detention here pending extradition hearings on the request of Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

She was captured Tuesday in a Manhattan motel by FBI agents on federal fugitive charges. Arrested with her was David R. Poindexter, Jr., a Chicago Negro who is being held in $100,000 bail on charges of harboring a fugitive.

The Allegany Republican said the proposal would allow approximately 38,000 patients in the nation's 16 VA hospitals to use the service without charge.

At present, only government employees are permitted use of FTS.

"To the hospitalized serviceman and his family, there is nothing more reassuring and comforting than a telephone call to the people back home," Hastings said.

Hastings said the measure would allow hospitalized service men and veterans to use the Federal Telecommunications System (FTS) an interlocking communications system provided by the General Services Administration for government agencies.

Would Allow VA Patients To Call Free

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. James F. Hastings, R-N.Y., announced Thursday he has introduced a proposal in Congress that would allow patients in Veterans Administration hospitals to telephone their families free of charge anywhere in the country.

Hastings said the measure would allow hospitalized service men and veterans to use the Federal Telecommunications System (FTS) an interlocking communications system provided by the General Services Administration for government agencies.

Hyde Park School Buses Collide, Eleven Students Are Injured

HYDE PARK

Eleven students at the Hyde Park Junior High School and a bus driver were injured at about 2:45 p.m. Thursday when two buses owned by the Hyde Park Central School District were involved in a collision near here, according to the Dutchess County sheriff's office.

Sergeant Albert Traver said a bus operated by Dominick P. Tirano, 35, of 58 Luty Drive, Hyde Park, stopped for passengers to get off when the rear of the bus was hit by a second bus operated by Paul S. Von Derheide, 29, of 65 Parsonage Street, Rhinebeck, who said the vehicle skidded on wet pavement when the brakes were applied.

Police said Von Derheide complained of back injuries and whiplash of the neck. He was taken to St. Francis' Hospital in Poughkeepsie and was released after treatment.

Two students were admitted to the hospital for further observation and treatment. They were Judy Lewis, 16, of 36 Stuyvesant Street, Poughkeepsie, who received a cerebral concussion and whiplash, and 18-year-old Delores Babcock, of East Dorsey Lane, Hyde Park, who sustained a sprained back and whiplash.

The other nine students were not seriously hurt, authorities said.

TOWN OF ULSTER

Wife on Trial for Killing Man Who Had Everything

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI)—Some of the mystery may be stripped from the bizarre, shadowy life of millionaire William E. Thoresen III when his widow goes to trial Monday on charges of killing him with one of the guns from his own vast arsenal.

Thoresen, at 32, was a man who seemed to have just about everything—youth, money, an attractive wife and a bright son. He also had a personal arsenal of weapons and explosives that mounted into tons.

The question is why? Was he merely a rich man with a fetish for guns? Or was there some sinister purpose behind his strange collection?

The mystery may make its start towards solution Monday as his widow, Louise, 34, goes on trial for murder in the walnut-paneled courtroom of Judge Joseph Joy.

Nude Body Discovered
She is accused of pumping five .38 caliber bullets into her husband whose nude body was discovered in an upstairs bedroom of their unpretentious home on a warm morning in early June.

The slender, long-haired defendant has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of insanity.

Subsequent investigation and testimony at Mrs. Thoresen's preliminary hearing was focused on a myriad of shadowy facets in Thoresen's life—including illegal drugs and the unresolved death of his brother five years ago at Lake Forest, Ill.

One important witness will be William McDermott, an attorney and neighbor of the Thoresens.

McDermott said earlier that on the morning of June 10, Mrs. Thoresen ran to his home in a state of near hysteria and cried, "I just shot William."

Claims Attempted Killing
He said she told him

Thoresen had tried to kill her broken ribs and numerous slaying to the effect that Mrs. Thoresen had once told him her husband had hired someone to kill his brother, Richard, and then himself killed the trigger man. McDermott, also made an addition to the police report, then himself killed the trigger

Daily Reminder... 1,500 American POWs

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Every morning as House and Senate members open their copy of the Congressional Record, they get a daily reminder that more than 1,500 Americans are prisoners of war or missing in action.

The same notice is there, day after day:

"A child asks: 'Where is daddy?' A mother asks: 'How is my son?' A wife asks: 'Is my husband alive or dead?' A Communist North Vietnam is sadistically practicing spiritual and mental genocide on over 1,500 American prisoners of war and their families."

"How long?" Rep. William J. Scherle, R-Iowa, a tall, husky two-term congressman is responsible for insertion of the 21-4 inch item-labeled "Man's Inhumanity to Man—How Long?"

He has been doing it since Jan. 26.

Scherle said his objective is to show relatives and friends of the POW's their plight has not been forgotten.

Why not change the message, at least?

"I believe in repetition," he said.

said. "By using the same thing every time, it makes an impact. Like driving a nail."

The POW statement costs insertion, based on the record's taxpayers about $10.66 per estimate of $128 per page.

Scherle, who served in the Navy reserve and Coast Guard, sees it as a small price to pay for a reminder of the POW's plight.

Scherle's item is included in a portion of the record reserved for "extension of remarks."

He said he has received hundreds of letters about the item.

"I'm very glad to see at least one congressman doing something to help these men," wrote Paul Rousseau of Sidney, Ohio.

Wilbur Foster of Haddon Heights, N.J., wrote: "To me, an average person who is not in your district or even your state, your small effort is received with much appreciation."

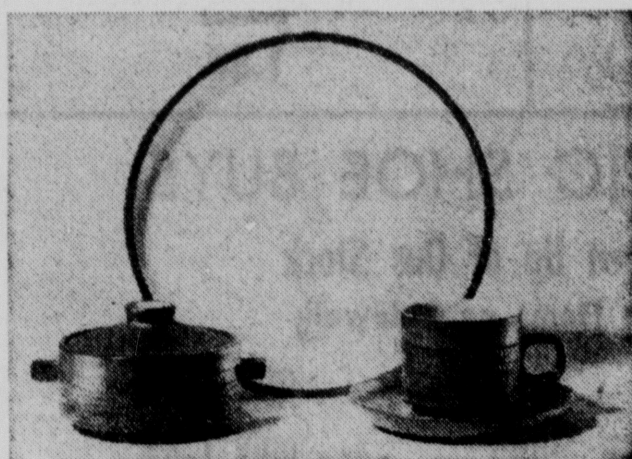

Mrs. Melrose Evans of Alameda, Calif., whose Air Force husband, James, has been missing more than five years said: "Think you. We all need to be constantly reminded about the plight of these men."

Glazer at Health Careers Parley

NEW YORK — Sponsored by the Health Resources Commission and the New York State Department of Health, the meeting was convened to discuss the serious shortage of trained health personnel throughout the State. There were more than 26,000 unfilled job openings in hospital facilities in New York State last year and that number is higher in 1970.

A highlight of the meeting, held at the Essex House, was the announcement that Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller proclaimed the day, "Health Careers Crusade Day." The Governor's proclamation noted that the State is experiencing an increasing demand for active, trained health care personnel. In creating a manpower pool to help meet this need, he urged that particular attention be given to the youth of the State whose career choices lie before them.

Dr. Hollis S. Ingraham, State health commissioner, was keynote speaker at the session and announced that his department will conduct a mass information program to inform the public on health career opportunities.

New Kiwanis President in Kapers' Show

The show was written by Jim Thompson, an account executive with radio station WGHQ, who also is serving as director.

Position Paper From Lenefsky

POUGHKEEPSIE

David Lenefsky, candidate for the State Senate, issued a position paper today on New York State taxes, state spending and the state debt.

In it, he asserts that "New York State has developed a financial cancer during the decade of the 1960s . . . in that low and middle income families are taxed the hardest in New York State while the wealthy and big business are favored under the State tax system."

"General business taxes have increased 50 per cent slower than the personal income tax and 75 per cent slower than state sales and consumption taxes," he states, adding that "general business taxes have been reduced by 25 per cent as a per cent of the state's cash revenues, from 20.1 per cent in 1960 to 15.2 per cent in 1970."

Lenefsky calls for New York State to "modify its special treatment, for capital gains, permitting exemptions for the sale of homesteads. It is difficult to see today why someone who invests in stocks and makes $10,000 should pay less than someone who works all year for $10,000." The position paper asserts, "if anything, the reverse should be true."

Concerning New York State spending, the West Shokan lawyer said that "during the past two years, the State budget has increased by 32 per cent, or 1.7 billion dollars. During the same period, however, State aid to localities has increased only 26.5 per cent—the slowest growth of all major categories of State spending."

Concluding he recommends:

- New York State tax big business and corporations at a higher rate.

- New York State freeze its bureaucratic growth. It makes no sense to operate a State government at an annual cost of 1.8 billion dollars. Our localities will never receive the amount of money they truly need from Albany, and be able to curb rising local property taxes, until Albany halts the spread of its bureaucracy.

CANDIDATE'S NIGHT — Ulster County Conservatives Candidate's Night, held earlier this week at Conservative Party Headquarters, 259 Fair Street, attracted many Conservative and Conservative-endorsed candidates including (l-r) Frances J. Vogt, Republican-Conservative candidate for district attorney; Harry S. Hoffman Jr., Conservative candidate for Congress and chairman of the Ulster County Conservative Party, and John L. Larkin, Republican-Conservative candidate for Supreme Court. Also making an appearance was Republican-Conservative Assemblyman H. Clark Bell. The event was sponsored by the Esopus and Kingston Area Conservative Party Clubs. (Photo Workshop photo)

WOODSTOCK — The Woodstock Democratic Committee announced today that Eugene Gold, Brooklyn district attorney, would be the Gold, twice elected as district attorney, is a popular figure in Brooklyn and well-known in all five boroughs of New York City. A highly-respected member of his profession, Gold was appointed by Mayor John V. Lindsay to the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council in 1967. He is a member of the Brooklyn, New York State and Kings County Criminal Bar Association. A graduate cum laude of Brooklyn Law School, Gold was admitted to practice in 1949 to the Second Judicial Department and subsequently to the United States Supreme Court as well as all intermediate courts.

In announcing Gold's acceptance, John Bonilla, Woodstock Democratic Town Chairman expressed his pleasure at having "such a distinguished guest for our speaker."

"Gold's distinguished record of participation in civic organizations and activities and his many awards for service, as well as his record of serving justice with honor and integrity," said Bonilla, "combine with his record of devotion to the protection and well-being of his constituents."

FESTIVAL TOUR STOP — The charming town garden at Herbert Cutler's residence, 106 St. James Street, is in readiness for visitors to the Kingston Fall Festival Saturday. Tours will include outstanding examples of pre-Revolutionary to modern architecture, landscaped gardens and terraces and floral arrangements by area garden clubs. Festivities will start at 11 a.m. and continue through 4 p.m. Opening ceremonies will feature the Indians Drum and Bugle Corps and a welcome by Mayor Francis R. Koenig. (Freeman photo by Kruh)

Bells to Ring For Festival

KINGSTON on the Architecture of the anniversary of an historic event, the ringing of church bells Saturday will signal the beginning of Kingston's second annual Fall Festival.

The records of the town have repeated references to the bells—the arrival of the first church bell from Europe, the peal of bells following the reading of New York State's first Constitution to the public and many other celebrations. The bells were a familiar sound to those citizens who have lived in the 17th and 18th century homes which will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Festival Day for visitors.

Following the ringing of the bells, Festival visitors and citizens gathered at the corner of Wall Street and North Front Street will hear a greeting of welcome from Mayor Francis Koenig and the Indians Drum Corps will add music and color to the scene.

Another part of the program scheduled for about 11:30 at Wall and North Front will be the arrival of the High School Band and the Drum Majorettes will exhibit their talents as a part of the good old KHS spirit for the homecoming football game scheduled for the afternoon between Kingston and Newburgh Free Academy at Dietz Stadium.

Tours of architecturally unique buildings will start from Old Dutch Church where tickets may be purchased detailing the route. Tickets are available also at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Fall Festival headquarters will be at 332 Wall Street in the Herzog building. Visitors will have an opportunity to view exhibits and slide lectures there. After the opening ceremonies on Wall Street, a slide lecture

At 4 p.m. Denise M. Abbey will present Today in Yesterday America featuring present day views of scenes associated with the country's past. Exhibits which will be open all day include glassware on loan from the Smith's Clove Museum Village and a hooked rug and button display arranged by Mrs. Raymond Bonestell. Added attractions will be the landscaped terraced gardens at houses on the tour and beautiful floral arrangements by area Garden Clubs at various homes along the route. Recipes stressing the use of Ulster County apples will be made available also.

Adding to the festive atmosphere will be sidewalk sales arranged by uptown merchants. In addition to the Indians Drum Corps, Harry Siemsen will supply the music of folk songs from his collection. It is fortunate for the area that Siemsen with his sister Miss Marie Siemsen has spent years collecting songs and legends, many of which would have been lost as newer forms of entertainment replaced the minstrel and story-teller. Renewed popularity of folk ballads will assure roaming singer Siemsen an appreciative audience.

Businessmen of the area have their part in this cooperative effort with the loan of exhibit space and a supply of refreshments. Inquiries from areas outside of Ulster County indicate that Festival publicity has interested potential tourists.

Warm Welcome From Chamber

KINGSTON enough to come back often." The success of the festival of Commerce as one of the co-sponsors of the annual Fall Festival extends a warm welcome to all visitors Saturday.

Tours, displays and sidewalk sales will combine to bring throngs to the historic Uptown Kingston area. The festival activities have been arranged through the efforts of the Friends of Historic Kingston with the chamber and uptown businessmen cooperating.

The community joins in making this as hearty a welcome as possible. Residents have opened their homes, museums have loaned displays and the entire festival schedule has been expanded to make a full day of events. The business community has done its part to provide a Fall Harvest Festival of Values. Len Cane, executive vice president of the Kingston Area Chamber of Commerce, has extended warm greetings to all who participate. Commending the fine cooperative efforts of the entire community he expressed the hope that those "visiting us from afar will like us well

Proceeds Aid Preservation

Proceeds from this year's fall festival will go for preservation of the Kiersted House, a project undertaken by the Friends of Historic Kingston.

The house at 95 John Street is one of the three most important frame houses within the district and will be restored exteriorly in period design but will continue to be occupied by a tenant or new owner as a tax producing property for the city.

New Wave of Culture, 'Education Wave,' Sweeping Europe

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) —
There's a new wave of culture sweeping Europe. It's the education wave, a stepup in formal schooling carried into the teens, a program which we take for granted in the United States. But for most Western European countries, it means a whole new classroom game. France is one example of how education is expanding. Before World War II, the secondary schools counted their pupil population at 300,000. Today, the number has swollen to 2 million. Now, for the first time, there are more teachers in France than there are members of the armed forces. One major reason for education's advances: The great surge of West Europe's prosperity in the last 20 years. A look at the new education, both at the secondary and higher level, in 16 Western European nations comes as part of a $250,000 marketing study sponsored by the European editions of Reader's Digest. The study involved interviews with 17,500 persons, the publication said.

Education today is looked on as a basic human right, the study found. But there still are problems. "Despite remarkable advances, Europe still has a long way to go, measured by the crucial factor of age at which the average student leaves school," the Digest researchers said. Only in Sweden and parts of Switzerland is the terminal education age established at 16, the minimum standard in the United States. Earlier departure from school largely is due to financial demands and a shortage of teachers. France, though, as one example, is raising the terminal age to 16 this year and Britain is planning to do so in 1972. In other countries, 14 and 15 still are the normal age. For students leaving school in Portugal, the minimum only recently was raised from 11 to 12. General improvement in education for all is shown, however, in the present size of the school population 18 years and above. During a 10-year period, the number of students taking some form of higher education doubled in most Western European countries. It tripled in Luxembourg, Norway, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

A Warning: Guard Against Food Bacteria

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Nutrition Columnist

Food science means a lot to the American consumer. It can to a large degree help protect the food she buys from contamination and spoilage. This, plus absolute kitchen cleanliness, adds up to both health and money protection.

The National Institute of Food Technologists was founded only in 1949. Yet today there are 9,000 professional members, whose fields are food chemistry, microbiology, nutritional adequacy and food engineering. The members, who prefer to call themselves food scientists, are in universities, government regulatory agencies and food companies. To a noticeable degree, most are concerned with protecting public welfare.

At Michigan State University, Dr. Richard V. Lechowich is professor in the Department of Food Sciences. His basic advice to all consumers is:

"If you have any doubts about the food you plan to serve, throw it out."

Bacteria that contaminate your food are his major concern. Today, with the holidays coming up with many parties and also with the high prices for food making it imperative you get every dollar's worth, he cautions:

"With cooler weather, so many people think the danger of food poisoning vanishes. That is not true. There is always danger of some bacteria lurking around your food supplies."

He continues: "This is less true than before most women began to practice greater cleanliness in preparing and storing food. Self-defrosting refrigeration helps, too, with its circulating currents of cold air. So do the use of styrofoam containers. But there is still danger of contamination."

Clostridium perfringens is one bacteria found in soil, water, food and in animal and human intestines. It is a gas gangrene which causes diarrhea, vomiting, and sometimes even more severe illness.

"Last year, in Tennessee, 1,600 children were infected by this bacteria from a school luncheon. The result of commercial food service, of course. But home cooks, also, can be dangerously careless," Lechowich warns.

He cautions against two other bacteria, salmonella and staphylococcus, which are also found on beef, fowl and pork.

"These can produce the same kinds of illness as the gas gangrene bacteria. Today, with so many meals eaten away from home, be sure the eating places, such as franchised spots, handle their foods as carefully as you do at home."

Large volumes of vulnerable food should be kept out to temperatures at which bacteria thrive. This means at below 45 degrees, or over 145 degrees. Refrigerate leftovers promptly. Divide into portions small enough to control temperatures of all parts of the food, not just most of them. When you reheat them, do so thoroughly; don't just warm-up. These are some protection hints he gives.

"Take extra cleanliness precautions with kitchen tools, particularly with cutting boards and mixing bowls. "Cooked meat is safe because heat destroys bacteria. But you need enough heat to do that," this professor of food science says. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

about four people and their curiously desperate struggles for sexual power. The movie captures a feeling between people and nature, that is about as sensuous as anything you've probably ever seen in a film. When Birkin first makes love to Ursula, in the woods it's a sort of mad scramble of lust. When, however, he and Gerald strip to the buff to wrestle—there is a sense of positive grace in the eroticism. It is such an appealing movie. —New York Times

Attanasio-King Nuptials Announced

MRS. JAMES A. KING JR.

Our Lady of Pompeii Church, Syracuse, was the setting of the wedding of Miss Janice Attanasio and James A. King Jr. on Saturday, Oct. 3. The Rev. Father Patane officiated at the double ring ceremony. Traditional wedding selections were offered by the organist, Matteo Falcone. Baskets of white gladioli decorated the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Attanasio of Lake Katrine, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. King Sr. of Belmont Gardens, Liverpool, N.Y.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a white brocaded satin gown with an empire waist, long sleeves, and a chapel length train. The waistline and center front of the gown from the waist to the hemline was trimmed with heavy lace threaded with white satin ribbon. A lace camelot cap held her double tiered illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of white carnations, tiny rose buds and Stephanotis, tied with satin streamers.

Maid of honor was Miss Barbara Kachura, Lake Katrine. Attendants were Mrs. George Attanasio, sister-in-law of the bride, Kingston; Anne Carro, Hurley; Mrs. John King, and Mrs. Daniel King, both sisters-in-law of the bridegroom, and from Syracuse. The honor attendant wore an orange crepe gown styled with a mandarin collar, and empire waist and cuffed bishop sleeves. The waistline was outlined in a matching braid. The attendants wore gowns of yellow crepe, similar in styling to the maid of honor's. All attendants wore stylized headpieces with matching veils and carried bouquets of carnations with tiny roses in the colors to match their gowns.

Daniel King, Syracuse, served as best man for his brother. Ushers were George Attanasio, brother of the bride, Kingston; Guy Prioretta; John King, and Patrick King, both brothers of the bridegroom, and all of Syracuse.

A brunch for out-of-town guests and close family members was held following the ceremony at The Country Inn, Lakeland. An evening reception for 150 guests was held at the Liverpool Country Club, Liverpool.

For her wedding journey to Bermuda, the bride chose a three piece orange and cream knitted suit with cream accessories. She wore a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. King is a graduate of Kingston High School and a 1969 graduate of Dutchess Community College where she earned an Associate of Arts degree in Science. She is employed by King and King Architects, Syracuse.

Her husband is an alumnus of North Syracuse High School and Rhode Island School of Design where he received a bachelor's degree in Architecture. He is an active member of the U.S. Army Reserves and is employed by King and King Architects, Syracuse.

The couple will reside at Candewood Gardens, 73½ East Oneida Street, Baldwinsville.

Arrangements of autumn leaves and yellow and rust chrysanthemums decorated the altar. ## Hints from Heloise for the Busy Housewife

Dear Heloise:

For the new mother who is tired of looking at her bottle sterilizer on the kitchen counter:

Try hiding it under an electric mixer cover. You'll find that it fits just right and is much more pleasing to the eye.

Joy Rabin

Especially great for those who don't have enough space in kitchen cabinets or pantries for storing this item out of sight.

It was a "joy" to hear from you, gal!

Heloise

Dear Heloise: Instead of keeping my aprons in a kitchen drawer, I fold them and pin them to the side sections of wire clothes hangers, then hang them in the closet. They stay wrinkle-free this way.

Mrs. K.M.S.

Dear Heloise: To make a "neat" round hole in a belt, etc., use the metal grommets, then set your machine to zig-zag with a stationary stitch.

Guide the needle around the grommet...

Look professional, with the thread matching the fabric (or contrasting).

A Fan

Dear Heloise: You mentioned putting plastic bags on the bed springs to make the turning of the mattress easier.

I went one step better and put a whole plastic cover on my springs — the one without the zipper.

This makes the mattress glide any way I want it without any effort at all.

A Reader

Dear Heloise: This hint is for women who do a lot of sewing and hate to put up their machine everytime they have to stop.

This is a real inconvenience because sometimes you find you have a few minutes to sew, but who wants to bother to take out that machine for just a few minutes. And yet it is now a good idea to leave your machine out because it gets all dusty.

I just made a discovery. I was trying to find something that would be suitable to cover my machine when left out and came up with this little gem. I found that the cover for my four-slice toaster would fit the head of my machine perfectly.

Now, isn't that great? It protects the machine, is not an eyesore and, besides, it costs nothing because I have a couple of extra ones that were not being used. I'm just pleased as punch!

Marlene Napier

...and I'm pleased too. Now that really tickles my fancy. I can't begin to tell you how much more sewing time this will give me. The biggest chore is getting out that machine. Right?

My hat's off to you...you're a luv!

Heloise

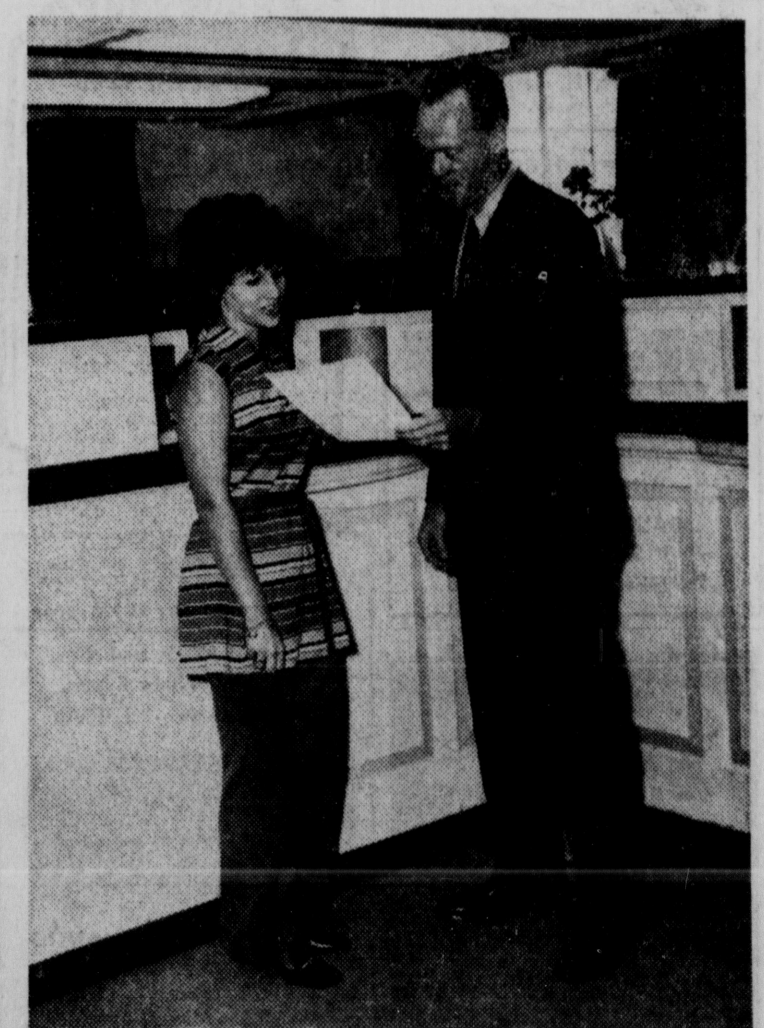

Dear Heloise: Recently my 82-year-old grandmother hit on a marvelous idea during a brief stay in the hospital.

While visiting her, I was complaining about my paper towel rack pulling out of the wall when I put on a new roll of paper towels. You know you really have to tug and pull to get off those first few towels on a new roll.

Grandma received her medicine in those little plastic pill cups and gave me a few of them with instructions to insert one in each end of the new roll of paper towels (rim end of cup out) and THEN put on the paper towel holder. Believe you me, it made all the difference in the world...the paper rolls beautifully now.

A NEW WAVE OF FASHION at The State of New York National Bank. Pants Suits are in! Girls at the bank recently requested that they be permitted to wear the suits on the job. Big Brown Eggs 3 BROTHERS HAS THEM!

NANCY GOULD, working in her kitchen, prepares a vegetable omelet using her own recipe which features low-calorie ingredients. The recipe is in her diet cookbook, "How to Gorge George Without Fattening Fanny." (UPI Telephoto)

Former Fashion Model Authors Diet Cookbook, 'How to Gorge George Without Fattening Fanny'

By CAROLYN A. BOWERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — A former fashion model — and former fatty — has written a diet cookbook designed to prevent extra pounds and reduce the growing number of American overweight.

The author is brunette Nancy Gould, 23, and the book is appropriately entitled, "How to Gorge George Without Fattening Fanny" Hawthorn, New York. The art of ingredient substitution is the solution. In other words, skim milk can hold a cake together just as well as the whole product.

One recipe for a chocolate filling includes no-cal cream soda, low-calorie chocolate pudding and unflavored gelatin. The caloric content, checked for accuracy by the Fitelson Laboratories, Inc., is only 64 per cup.

Her recipes also include other items like cottage cheese, yogurt, skim milk unsweetened and fresh fruit, lemon juice and numerous spices. The whole idea is to maintain flavor and still not fatten "fanny."

"I wrote this book because I wanted to show people that watching their weight can be fun," Miss Gould states. "Believe me, with these recipes you can be eating some of the most delicious food and still not have to worry about calories."

The former mannequin said in an interview that the proof of the pudding is her own personal experience, beginning with her modeling career four years ago.

"I hated my job," she said. "I just couldn't adjust to the pattern of life. And, us psychologists say, mood influences your appetite, especially overindulgence."

"Depressed and unhappy, I started eating. I ate everything I could get my hands on — cakes, cookies, everything and anything. Psychologically, I guess I figured if I destroyed myself physically, I couldn't work anymore."

Overindulgence put on 44 extra pounds, she said, far too many for a model with a smallbone figure even though she's five feet six inches tall. Normally, she weighed about 104.

"Like a lot of other overweight people, I tried all the fad diets," Miss Gould said. "I bought diet book after diet book. The pounds went, but as soon as I went off the diet, they came back."

She said she started going to her bookings in looser skirts, baggy pants, long coats — even before the maxi — and tight girdles. But it didn't help.

Finally, she received a request from her agent to go back to her native Los Angeles. There, in her mother's kitchen — where her love of food really had begun — Miss Gould began working on her weight problem. Her objective was to reduce the calories in foods without changing the taste.

"I knew as a dieter," she said, "that I was a cheater and that in order to save my body I had to satisfy my mouth." She called her substitution and blending of ingredients "diachiatry," which includes the calorie as well as psychological aspect of eating.

"For the next six months," she said, "I ate, slept and cooked — mostly cooked. But when I was through, I had lost the 44 pounds and gained more than 200 recipes."

Miss Gould remained in Los Angeles about two and a half years, during which time she was part owner of a dress boutique. But she finally returned to New York and developed an even greater interest in foods. She began her own low-calorie food business, Nancy Gould, Inc. and wrote "How to Gorge George Etc." The recipes included in the book have amusing names like "Spare-me No-Ribs Barbecue" and "Cheddar Cheater Rolls."

The book also contains some illustrations, such as the one of a woman looking at her obesity reflected in a mirror. To the side is written: "Mirror, mirror, on the wall. Looks like I shouldn't eat anything at all."

Flag Desecration Subject in Dutchess

By TIM SCHUSTER

POUGHKEEPSIE
"All parts of the anatomy are not created equal. When one person wears a flag as underwear and another as an arm-patch on a uniform there is a definite difference."

The voice was that of Dutchess County District Attorney Albert M. Rosenblatt, speaking as part of a three-man panel Thursday night to discuss the first amendment, free speech, and flag desecration.

And the occasion was an open meeting of the Mid-Hudson Chapter, New York-Civil Liberties Union, held before a packed house of several hundred persons at the Unitarian Fellowship Hall in Poughkeepsie.

Vincent A. Tasciotti, Pleasant Valley American Legion and County chairman of that organization's Americanism Committee, and ACLU staff counsel from New York City Burt Newborne provided the extremes of comment, while Rosenblatt "walked the line" by his own admission.

As expected, much comment was concerned with the specific instance of a social studies teacher who was arrested for displaying a green and white replica of the American Flag in Pleasant Valley, symbolizing ecology.

DA Rosenblatt dismissed the charges against the man after he was arrested by sheriff's deputies this summer, arousing the ire of the Pleasant Valley Legion and especially Tasciotti.

Newborne opened his presentation by noting three distinct steps of "flag veneration." The first dealt with compulsory salutes, which was overruled in 1943 by the Supreme Court. The second was termed verbal abuse, and this right was upheld in 1968.

The third, and most controversial, has yet been resolved and deals with non-verbal communicative acts with the flag such as superimposing symbols on it or burning it.

Two such cases are pending in the Supreme Court. Newborne said the ACLU's position on flag desecration that "ritualistic abstinence to the trappings of state cannot be enforced."

When asked from the audience whether he could conceive of any act of flag desecration which should be legislated against, he replied that he could not. "If someone superimposed a swastika on the flag, it would make me angry," he said "but I don't think a person should be arrested just because he makes someone else angry."

When Tasciotti took the floor, he said that this talk of flag desecration was "getting me in the gills. I don't like to appeal to people on emotional grounds," he said, "but emotions are what separate us from the animals."

He added that he had had "enough permissiveness. We are builders in the Legion, not destroyers," and added that the Legion had donated $2.5 million to ecology groups four years ago, "before it became fashionable" but asked that groups use some other symbol than the American flag.

It was brought out by Newborne that flag desecration laws are a fairly recent event in our history, with the first on the books in 1898 in Nebraska and the first in New York in 1905.

He pointed out that there had been no cases of prosecution on the statute from 1905 until the Vietnam War, when the cases proliferated.

Newborne noted that a 1968 Nixon-Agnew campaign poster contained the American flag cut out in the shape of the United States with pictures of both candidates superimposed.

Tasciotti was asked a question from the audience as to whether the Legion was selective in who makes use of the flag, and as persons on Wall Street this be judged.

One young lady in the audience defended the flag mutations by saying that the larger issues such as "who can usurped the flag proper and she would not want to be identified with its connotations. Thus personal beliefs to a large extent, as the laws are ill-defined in part and intent must be judged.

And an old lady won general applause by suggesting that the flag controversy was totally irrelevant in the face of much larger issues such as "who can

He replied that he was in some of the problem in pointing out that the decision to prosecute is influenced by many mutations are just a way of saying, "This flag represents something different to me."

One young lady in the audience defended the flag mutations by saying that the larger issues such as "who can

Ellenville School Board: Learning Program Detailed

ELLENVILLE
Ellenville Central School's Learning Disabilities Program, which surveys a child's ability to adapt to the school environment, was detailed and explained by Elementary Principal Vincent Stanger at the recent Board of Education meeting.

The Board also approved a request to provide lunch service at the Pine Grove school rather than force the elementary students to commute daily to the main cafeteria for lunch. And, later in the meeting, Superintendent Thomas Hayden outlined the school's latest program designed to battle narcotics abuse among students.

The Learning Disabilities Program, said Stanger, begins before a child enters school for the first time. It was described as a testing service that enables school officials to detect certain factors that might interfere with a child's learning capability.

The pre-school test, it was explained, screens students for possible defects in hearing, sight and speech as well as the child's "readiness" for school and his "balance" pertinent to learning. Psychological problems, mental disability and perceptual handicaps are also tested.

The program, it was noted, continues throughout the child's education, with re-testing of those students already in school. Following preliminary tests, a prescription, if needed, is recommended and school officials subsequently attempt to insure that "followup treatment" is undertaken by parents, teachers or specialists.

In other matters undertaken by the Board of Education, it was decided to bow to parental "pressure" and provide lunch service at the Pine Grove school during "bad weather."

At the September meeting of the school board, several parents petitioned the school policymakers to take such a step. They noted that students attending the Pine Grove School are forced to commute, via school bus, to the main cafeteria ever day for lunch. They further alleged that the continued exposure to alternating warm and cold climates could be detrimental to the children's health.

After some initial hesitancy, the Board of Education agreed to provide lunch service at the outlying school between Nov. 15 and March 15. Food and supervisory personnel will be transported daily to the school at a cost to the district of approximately $2,600, according to Hayden.

The school's in-depth, and partially revised, program to counter drug use among students was then outlined by Hayden. The District Superintendent revealed an eight-point plan with, he noted, no special emphasis placed on any of the proposals.

Included in the program is an inter-district teacher education program that will be operated in conjunction with existing programs at the Monticello, Library and Fallsburg districts. The educational program, Hayden told The Freeman, will enable teachers to intelligently counsel students on the drug problem.

Other points in the program include the education of counselors and school psychologists and school physicians and nurses. Health Education teachers also will be given in-depth training so they will be able to counsel secondary level students. Also planned is coordination of the Health and Drug Education Programs, establishment of a community liaison with the Narcotics Guidance Council and the County Health Department and an adult education program for the future.

In addition, said Hayden, student groups will be formed along peer-group treatment lines.

Wawarsing Sets Budget Hearing Date

ELLENVILLE
Wednesday, Nov. 4 has been the date set by the Wawarsing Town Board for a public hearing on the newly proposed 1971 operating budget for the township.

The new budget, completed Oct. 10, includes appropriations of more than $684,000, with an excess of $521,000 scheduled to be raised by taxes. In the budget, Town councilmen indicate an expected $52,109.40 in state aid revenue with total revenue listed at more than $140,000.

Major items in the budget include approximately $190,000 for highway repair and $60,000 for "machinery." A large portion of the budget is designated for salaries for town employees.

The budget was preliminarily approved by councilmen shortly before the Oct. 10 deadline, despite the fact that contract negotiations with town highway workers have stalled. It was speculated that the budget may have to be revised after a new contract with highway workers is approved.

The next meeting between union officials and councilmen is expected to take place Oct. 29. Town officials have indicated that the two sides are "not far apart," but both are, nevertheless, standing fast in their respective demands and offers.

Among the demands that town officials are reportedly opposed to is a replacement of compensatory time for overtime hours with an overtime payment of time and a half for highway workers.

It Was Raining Champagne in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — All the clouds have rolled by for the Baltimore Orioles, basking in a shower of champagne after they turned a rainy payday into a World Series bonanza.

The Orioles battered the Cincinnati Reds 9-3 Thursday at rain-drenched Memorial Stadium to complete a five-game blitz of baseball's 67th summit battle, pocket winners' shares of $15,000 plus per-player and rid themselves of the stigma of last year's Series setback at the hands of the upstart New York Mets.

"It's payday, and we had to come out to pick up our checks," Orioles Manager Earl Weaver said before the American League champions rode a 15-hit barrage and the left arm of Mike Cuellar to the Series-clinching triumph over a power-laden but pitching-thin Cincinnati club.

Baltimore's fourth victory in five games closed out the best-of-seven series and gave the Orioles whopping bonuses in addition to their regular, twice-monthly pay envelopes. Moreover, it vindicated their claim to major league supremacy after a year of attrition.

"The money is a great reward but the personal satisfaction of being the best ball club means more," said Frank Robinson, who led the Orioles to their initial series conquest five years ago against Los Angeles and started their final charge Thursday with a two-run homer.

"This makes up for everything," said Brooks Robinson, whose clutch hitting and sensational defensive play earned him landslide acclaim as the most valuable player in the series. "Nothing can replace winning for the first time (1966), but there's more satisfaction bouncing back to do it again."

Orioles Rebound

The Orioles, beaten in five games by the Mets last October, rebounded with 108 regular season wins—the last 11 in succession—then swept the AL pennant playoffs in three games and won three more from the Reds before Lee May's three-run eighth inning homer snapped the 17-game streak Wednesday.

That victory kept Cincinnati alive, but the Orioles applied the death blow Thursday as Cuellar shackled the Reds on six hits.

"This year, we had a little added incentive," said Paul Blair, whose nine hits matched Brooks Robinson's record-tying total for a five-game series. "We worked harder to make things go our way."

The Mets did everything they had to do to win last year—just like we did in this Series. But I don't think we played up to our capability against them."

Cuellar, a 24-game winner during the season but an early knockout victim in the second Series game, was at his best Thursday after a shaky start.

He yielded three runs on four hits in the first inning, then checked the Reds on two harmless singles the rest of the way. 116r yxx sptb59 egl6

"A typical Cuellar game," said Harry Dalton, the Orioles' front office boss. "He has first inning troubles, then zip, zip, zip."

Heavy morning rains preceded the Reds' opening salvo and a deluge of Baltimore hits followed it.

Frank Robinson, 0-for-9 in the first two games at Cincinnati last weekend, closed the gap in bottom of the first with his second homer of the Series.

Birds Score Two

The Orioles scored two runs in the second to take the lead and added two more in the third, another in the fifth on Merv Rettenmund's homer and a final pair in the eighth.

Blair and Dave Johnson led the assault against six Cincinnati pitchers with three hits apiece.

"We had deep respect for the Reds but I think we caught them short on pitching," said Brooks Robinson who received a new car as the Series MVP following his 9-for-21, two-homer binge.

"Sure, we used 14 pitchers in the Series," said Red Manager Sparky Anderson. "But I've got to do what the scoreboard shows. They just kept hitting us. Give Baltimore batters the credit."

The Orioles banged out 50 hits in the five games. Their 10-home runs set a record for a five-game set.

"Baltimore just came out hungry and whipped us," Anderson said. "I think they went out to prove something this year, and they did. They had to live all year with the fact that the Mets beat them."

"I know how Earl must feel. He's on Cloud Nine. He had to eat crow last year. Now I'm eating crow."

"This is just a superb ball club, an outstanding ball club," Weaver said as his players revelled in a champagne-splashing, shaving cream-squirting victory party—and caravans of horn-toting cars began clogging the downtown streets in a wild celebration of the Orioles' second world championship.

KC Trades Garrett To San Diego Chargers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Mike Garrett, who has said he will quit football after this season to pursue a baseball career, was traded by the Kansas City Chiefs Thursday to the San Diego Chargers for a future draft choice.

In exchange for the former Heisman Trophy winner from Southern California, the Chiefs acquired the Chargers' 1971 second-round draft rights.

Garrett, 26, is in his fifth season of professional football. Chiefs' coach Hank Stram said he made the trade for three reasons.

"First, Mike had previously stated this would be his last year in pro football and that he would pursue a baseball career at the end of this season. Second, our running backs have developed to a point where they will give us the continued efficiency and consistency that we are seeking. We are fortunate to have both quality and depth at the running back position in persons like Warren McVea, Wendell Hayes, Bobby Holmes and Ed Podolak.

"And third, we had an opportunity to obtain a second-round draft choice for Mike. I felt that opportunity would not be available after the season."

Stram added:

"We'll always appreciate the great contributions Mike has made to our team. And, we wish him front-page success with the San Diego Chargers."

Garrett was the Chiefs' No. 3 rusher through the first four games this season, with 63 yards on 21 carries. He had been sidelined much of the time with injuries.

Garrett led the Chiefs in rushing and pass receiving last season, but had his biggest year as a professional in 1967 when he ran for 1,087 yards, scoring nine touchdowns.

As a rookie in 1966, Garrett totaled 801 yards and had a 5.5 yards per carry average.

He played on both Kansas City Super Bowl teams, in 1966 against Green Bay, and last January against Minnesota, scoring on a five-yard TD run that gave the Chiefs a 16-0 halftime lead en route to a 23-7 win.

The Chiefs acquired Garrett almost on a fluke before the merger of the two pro leagues. When the Los Angeles Rams chose Garrett high in the National Football League draft, teams from the old AFL bypassed him, thinking he was a cinch to sign with his hometown team.

The Chiefs took a chance in the 20th round, drafted him and wound up outbidding the Rams for Garrett's services. The amount of the bonus was never officially announced, but some reports said it was as high as $300,000.

Garrett, also an outstanding collegiate baseball player at USC, has been drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Maines' Dates Wrong

Due to confusion on the part of the sports department, the dates of Tommy Maines' legendary football career were erroneously reported in yesterday's Daily Freeman. Maines was a four-year letterman from 1934 through 1937.

BALTIMORE (UPI)—It was a World Series in which everything Brooks Robinson did was right.

Even when he was called out on strikes in the eighth inning of Thursday's final game, it seemed like the perfect opportunity for the Orioles' fans to cheer him on his way back to the dugout, and they did.

Robinson won the Most Valuable Player award by a mile. Afterwards, he remained his calm, phlegmatic self, but still was moved to call it "the greatest thing that ever happened to me."

"This makes up for everything. There's a lot of satisfaction and pride involved in bouncing back to win it," Robinson said.

"When you feel that you had the best club and didn't win it, like last year, it's a long wait to get it back."

For a year, the Orioles had lived with the memories of last year's World Series five-game loss to the New York Mets and, though they rarely spoke of it, it was on their minds.

"It was a long winter for us last year and I didn't want to go through another winter like that," said first baseman Boog Powell.

"You know what would have happened. It would have been the same thing. We would have listened to people all winter asking what happened to you guys against the 'Big Red Machine?' Well, we have a machine of our own."

Robinson — 1 for 19 in last year's Series — had nine hits in the Series, scored five runs and led his team with six RBIs. He made defensive gems in each of the first three games and scored the winning run in the first two.

"Robinson dominated the Series," said Sparky Anderson, the losing manager. "He deserved to win the Most Valuable Player award unanimously."

After the Reds won for the only time Wednesday in the fourth game, Robinson said he would not have been terribly distressed for Baltimore to blow the Series.

"I'd be able to live with it," he said at the time, and Thursday he celebrated with the same attitude.

Wearing a black T-shirt and his uniform pants and with his arms folded across his chest, Robinson faced the press. Someone thought he didn't look happy enough for a World Series winner, and asked him, "No, I'm pretty happy."

Brooks said, "It's a personal thing with me. There's a lot of satisfaction."

Robinson said he didn't notice the fans cheering him after his eighth-inning strikeout "because I was so mad about striking out."

"I heard 'em, but it didn't ring any bells," he said.

Mark Belanger, the Orioles' shortstop, said Wednesday's setback made Baltimore that much more alert Thursday.

"There were some thoughts in my mind, yes, about last year," he said. "I think that's why we shook it up so much today, bore down harder. Today, we'd get a run, and everybody would say let's get another, let's get five, six, 10."

"As soon as we got the run, we forgot about that and were thinking 'let's get more.'"

All the Baltimore players admitted last year's series weighed hard on them in this year's.

"After last year, I think we dedicated ourselves to making up for it," said Frank Robinson. "No one said anything out loud, but I think we all were thinking to ourselves."

Added Belanger:

"I think we all had something to prove."

The Big Dead Red Machine

BALTIMORE (AP) — As thousands of happy fans streamed out of Memorial Stadium, a woman walked into the front office of the Baltimore Orioles bearing a gift.

She turned over a small jar containing assorted nuts and bolts, and labeled, "The Big Red Machine."

The colorful nickname had been applied to the Cincinnati Reds during their drive to the National League pennant, but the Orioles had just finished dismantling the machine—piece by piece.

"There's a lot of bird seed in that Big Red Machine now," said first baseman Boog Powell after a 9-3 victory Thursday had given Baltimore the World Series four games to one. "It's the big dead machine now."

The Orioles outscored the Reds 33-20 in five games, finishing with a 15-hit flurry in the final game while scoring nine runs for the second time.

Although the Orioles narrowly missed a sweep, losing the fourth game on Lee May's three-run eighth-inning homer, they had to come from behind in three victories—twice overcoming 3-0 leads and once a 4-0 deficit.

Mike Cuellar, one of Baltimore's three 20-game winners, hurled a six-hitter in the clincher, blanking the Reds on two hits after a three-run first inning.

It was Brooks Robinson, 9-for-21 at the plate with two homers and six runs batted in and an outstanding fielder who stood above the crowd.

"This makes up for everything," said Robinson, who went 1-for-19 when the Orioles were upset by the New York Mets in the 1969 World Series.

"We had come back," Powell said. "It was a long winter last year trying to live down the Mets."

The Orioles have now won 228 regular season and postseason games in two years, but outfielder Paul Blair said the Series comeback was still most important. "Maybe people will believe we're a good team now," he said.

Except for Lee May, who had seven hits and eight RBI, Baltimore pitchers just about shackled the other top Cincinnati hitters.

Pete Rose, Johnny Bench, Bobby Tolan and Tony Perez had a combined 14-for-76 at the plate and only six RBI, with Perez 1-for-18 and no RBI.

But Robinson again put it in proper perspective when talking about his diving catches:

"A half-foot difference and they would have been base hits," he said. "I was lucky to be in the right spot. That's the difference between winning and losing."

At last year's 145-day meeting, 721,941 patrons bet a total of $51,631,795, resulting in a return of $3,844,386 to the state treasury.

acquired the Chargers' 1971 second-round draft rights.

Garrett, 26, is in his fifth season of professional football. Chiefs' coach Hank Stram said he made the trade for three reasons.

"First, Mike had previously stated this would be his last year in pro football and that he would pursue a baseball career at the end of this season. Second, our running backs have developed to a point where they will give us the continued efficiency and consistency that we are seeking. We are fortunate to have both quality and depth at the running back position in persons like Warren McVea, Wendell Hayes, Bobby Holmes and Ed Podolak.

"And third, we had an opportunity to obtain a second-round draft choice for Mike. I felt that opportunity would not be available after the season."

Stram added:

"We'll always appreciate the great contributions Mike has made to our team. And, we wish him front-page success with the San Diego Chargers."

Garrett was the Chiefs' No. 3 rusher through the first four games this season, with 63 yards on 21 carries. He had been sidelined much of the time with injuries.

Garrett led the Chiefs in rushing and pass receiving last season, but had his biggest year as a professional in 1967 when he ran for 1,087 yards, scoring nine touchdowns.

As a rookie in 1966, Garrett totaled 801 yards and had a 5.5 yards per carry average.

He played on both Kansas City Super Bowl teams, in 1966 against Green Bay, and last January against Minnesota, scoring on a five-yard TD run that gave the Chiefs a 16-0 halftime lead en route to a 23-7 win.

The Chiefs acquired Garrett almost on a fluke before the merger of the two pro leagues. When the Los Angeles Rams chose Garrett high in the National Football League draft, teams from the old AFL bypassed him, thinking he was a cinch to sign with his hometown team.

The Chiefs took a chance in the 20th round, drafted him and wound up outbidding the Rams for Garrett's services. The amount of the bonus was never officially announced, but some reports said it was as high as $300,000.

Garrett, also an outstanding collegiate baseball player at USC, has been drafted by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Pacing a sloppy track at Vernon Downs Thursday night, Friendly Harhu managed a victory in 2:15 3-5 in the $2,400 eighth race, beating Victory Wreath by a nose. She returned a handsome $24.20. Easter Candy took third place honors in the mile.

Elsewhere in state harness racing, Mr. Goose weakened in the stretch at Batavia and was passed by Muf of the Turf and Little Beve in the $2,200 ninth race. Muf of the Turf ended up the winner by half a length, and paid $10.40. His time on a sloppy track was 2:10 3-5.

At Saratoga, Sales Pitch paced a wet track in 2:15 1-5 to beat Sweet City Sue by a neck in the $1,500 ninth race. Mr. Thorn was third. The winner returned $6.60.

Little Miss Judith overcame a break just past the first quarter at Yonkers to win the $32,000 feature. She triumphed over Fay Barmin, with Casablanca Girl coming in third. Time for the mile was 2:04. The winner, a 3-5 favorite, returned $3.40 for her fifth victory in 20 starts.

Clegg's Recipe for Success: Create Pride

By IRA FUSFELD

NEW PALTZ
It has often been said that John Lindsay's job is the second toughest in the nation, but to listen to Dr. Richard Clegg, new Physical Education Chairman at the State University, one gets the feeling that he is the holder of that title. Of course he's not (John Neumaier is), but Dr. Clegg has fallen into a job that three other men have held in the past three years and he has undertaken a course with obstacles, both tangible and in-tangible, which may require Herculean efforts to overcome. To get some idea of the cloudy situation into which Clegg, a graduate of Stanford University, has stepped several basic points should be introduced: 1. he is the fourth man in four years to hold the job; 2. the only reason most students register for physical education courses at the college is because they are required; 3. varsity athletics are regarded by most of the new breed of college students as "a waste of time" and that more emphasis should be placed on intramural sports; 4. New Palitz has had a history of losing teams, stemming mainly from the fact that the college can't attract the first-rate athlete; and 5. money for adequately running both physical education courses and varsity athletics is scarce. Clegg has Energy When considered as an entity it offers, to say the least, a discouraging outlook. But Clegg, even though he's been at the job over two months, still possesses energy, ideas, and hope, and that must mean things are going well because he should last lost them all by now.

"This institution needs programs that can bring to it pride," he says, "and this department has the responsibility to build the best athletic program it can as a source of common pride."

To have pride you logically must have something of which to be proud. Right now New Palitz can boast a fine athletic facility in Elting Gymnasium and a perhaps soon to be nationally-known soccer team. But these two things aren't enough and Clegg is fully aware of it.

"There is no substitute for a successful program," he admits, "and this is a win conscious country."

How is he going to do it? Clegg says he has several things in the works.

"We are now in the process of finding a place for all of our programs based on what the students want and what we are able to provide," he begins.

"We are looking for a balanced program and will meet the needs of students, faculty and the local community." To accomplish this he has created committees to look into different areas. One currently under discussion is chaired by Arnold

Lent and deals with facilities planning, or who will use the gym and when.

New Building
"We will have a new building under construction in the winter," Clegg continued, "and we have $460,000 to spend for equipment." So another committee will look into just what to buy.

"We want to have the right things so we'll be able to move right in when the building's ready." It's supposed to be finished in the fall of 1973.

As for varsity athletics and winning teams, Clegg has two things going for him: the college has changed its admissions policy which means that a more energetic recruiting campaign can begin; and the department is initiating an athletic coaching minor which is expected to attract a better quality athlete to New Palitz.

The former plan gives each department a certain allocation of students whom they may want to have admitted here. The prospective student has only to meet minimum State University requirements instead of the rigid competitive basis 60 per cent of new entrants will face. Thus, a good high school athlete with a not so good high school average can get into college to study and play ball.

Clegg even hopes that sometime in the not so distant future a scholarship fund for athletes will be set up with the assistance of the Faculty-Student Association.

Latter Plan Passed
The latter plan was passed last spring while the then chairman, Dr. Albert Negretti, was at the reins. Not only will athletes be attracted to New Palitz, but for the first time students will take Phys. Ed. as an elective rather than as a chore.

These are the major plans. But several other ideas run through Clegg's mind which he feels will help in the long run.

"We are contemplating discontinuing junior varsity teams in everything except soccer and basketball," he remarked. "Our efforts would then be placed on the varsity teams and coaches will be able to devote full time to their particular varsity sport." What he's looking for is one coach for one sport with his out-of-season time going towards teaching and recruiting.

State Finance
Clegg would also like to see the state finance varsity teams and coaches. Currently, student government funds take care of the former, while the latter is included in the coach's teaching salary.

"The state has to be shown the justification that athletics is educational," he explained. Clegg insists he's in the right place at the right time. He says it's easier to get things done at New Palitz than it was at Long Beach State College, California, where he was most recently director of intramurals.

He also believes he has the right people with whom to work. Joe Owens, the athletic director, gets much of Clegg's praise.

"Joe is responsible for the athletic program, I'm only responsible for the overall picture," Clegg said.

The Chairman observed that he's been very pleased with what he's seen of his coaches so far.

"In Bob Durkin and Ed Bell we are highly qualified in soccer and cross country," he says, and he'll make further evaluations as he sees the others work.

Should the prospects be considered optimistic at New Palitz? Yes, if you believe Clegg, and he's pretty convincing.

DR. RICHARD CLEGG

Young Fan Takes Grid Game to Court

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI)—Joel Block, a 22-year-old football fan goes to court today to try and stop Saturday's traditional Michigan-Michigan State game because he says it is just as much a public nuisance as a rock festival.

"I'm not an acid freak or a pill popper or anything like that," said Block, a bearded former sports editor of the Michigan daily who now works as a janitor. "I believe in fighting within the system for what's right."

Block, who rarely misses a Michigan football game and watches many others on television, said rowdyism, drinking and traffic problems caused by an estimated 100,000 fans at Michigan Stadium would be just as much a public nuisance as a rock festival banned last month at Goose Lake Park, where thousands of young persons gathered the month before for three days.

He filed suit last week in Washtenaw County court to halt Saturday's game and a hearing was set for 3 p.m. today.

"It's ridiculous when the court issued an injunction preventing the rock festival before it even took place because sole law-and-order officials speculated that the festival might be a public nuisance," Block said. "If the courts use the same reasoning, they will find even more of a public nuisance at Michigan football games."

Block said state laws were broken at the stadium, referring to testimony that it took two trucks to carry off empty liquor bottles last week after a game with Texas A. & M.

"The police can't stop all the drinking in the stands," he said. "That's an unenforceable law in my book."

Block said since filing suit he has gotten written support from "football widows—those wives who lose their husbands to the Saturday afternoon football game," but "my only purpose in bringing this court action is to demonstrate the stupidity of the courts. I don't really want to see the game canceled—that is if the courts admit they're wrong."

lie Taylor each tossed in 20 points for the Nets.

In another home-court victory, the Floridians wiped out a 12-point deficit at Miami Beach to beat the Cougars. Larry Jones led the winners with 26 points. Bob Verga's 34 was high for the Cougars.

The Suns' seasonal NBA debut was a success due to the 30-point performance of Dick Van Arsdale. Phoenix and Boston remained close until the Celtics hit a cold streak, unable to score for 4½ minutes as the Suns raced to a 16-point fourth-quarter lead. Boston, winless in two games this year, was led by rookie Dave Cowens' 27 points.

Richman Likes New York Jets Over Baltimore

A STAR IS BORN — Mike Connor dribbles around two giants of the basketball world — Milwaukee Bucks Lew Alcindor (R) and Los Angeles Lakers Gail Goodrich — during filming of a segment of the "Mannix" TV series at Paramount Studios. In his college days Connors played basketball at UCLA, where Alcindor and Goodrich starred, but would probably find himself a little short when it comes to the 7-foot-1 Alcindor. (UPI TELEPHOTO).

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Brooks Robinson never misses.

Nothing 20 miles around third base anyway.

Inside the 10-yard line is another story though. He hasn't been doing a whole lot there lately.

Brooks Robinson gives a little study to Sunday's ball game between the Baltimore Colts and New York Jets, for example, and whaddya think he says?

He says he likes Baltimore. Brooks Robinson is entitled to his opinion. When it comes to playing third base I'm not going to argue with him; when it comes to football, I might. I think the Jets will beat the Colts.

Then there's that other skull-cracker between the Minnesota Vikings and Dallas Cowboys at Minnesota.

"Any team," says Tom Landry, the Cowboys' coach, about the Vikings, "that can hold the opposition to 23 points in four games you have to respect."

Likes Cowboys

Okay, I respect the Vikings and so do the oddsmakers who make them 9-point choices. I respect the Vikings but I've been noticing the Cowboys' passing game coming on each week and that makes me like them over Minnesota Sunday.

In Sunday's other games: Atlanta over Denver — Even in the Broncos' own backyard, Cleveland over Detroit — Week in and week out the Browns are the best coached club in the league.

Kansas City over Cincinnati — Hank Stram has the Chiefs ready even if they have to play Monday night instead of Sunday which could happen if the Reds get hot and come back to Riverfront Stadium.

Los Angeles over Green Bay — The Packers are coming off a Monday night game and look up the percentage of victories for the following week among the teams that do.

Miami over Buffalo — Don Shula has a little added incentive. The Dolphins are deadlocked with Baltimore for the American Conference's Eastern lead.

San Francisco over New Orleans — I think the Forty Niners are going to do especially well this year.

Boston over the New York Giants — Joe Kapp starts earning his money.

St. Louis over Philadelphia — I'm sure the Eagles are gonna win a ball game, it's just that I don't know when.

Houston over Pittsburgh — Possibility of an upset here if the Oilers get careless.

San Diego over Chicago — Who are the Bears going to find to take Gale Sayers' place?

Monday

Oakland over Washington — After which people will say, go figure the Redskins, they beat Detroit and then lose to Oakland.

The Colleges

They tell me Auburn is loaded this year. Great offense, good defense, everything. I've seen things happen you'd never believe and the funny part is about a lot of those things is that they happened to some people who were supposed to be loaded also.

Auburn, which has everything, is rated 17 points over Georgia Tech, which could use some help on defense. That may be the case but I'm going with Tech this week.

In the other games I like LSU over Kentucky, Notre Dame over Missouri, Nebraska over Kansas, Georgia over Vanderbilt, Colorado over Oklahoma, Penn State over Syracuse, Ohio State over Minnesota, Rice over SMU, Stanford over Washington State, Michigan over Michigan

State, Princeton over Colgate, Tennessee over Alabama, Pittsburgh over West Virginia and Yale over Columbia, Texas Southern over Washington, Tech over Mississippi State, Also, Houston over Oregon, State, the Air Force over Navy, UCLA over California, Texas A. M. over TCU, Duke over North Carolina State, Arizona State, Brigham Young, South Carolina over Maryland, Yale over Columbia, Texas Tech over Mississippi State, Purdue over Iowa, Tulane over North Carolina, Northwestern over Wisconsin, Army over Virginia and Illinois over Indiana.

Homecoming Day Tribute to Tommy Maines

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Sports Editor
KINGSTON
Tommy Maines, whose untimely death this year shocked the area sports world, was one of the all-time athletic greats at Kingston High School in the 1930's — a rare and authentic four-letter man.
He earned varsity letters in football, basketball, track and baseball (4 years) under former coach and KHS athletic director, G. Warren Kias.
Later he was destined to be tabbed as a potential All-America football player at Syracuse University, only to have his career ruined by a series of injuries. He had a fantastic season with the Orange Frosh in 1936 and was regarded by Syracuse followers as a successor to the legendary Vic Hanson and Jack McBride.
Coach Kias paid lofty tribute to his one-time high school star. "Tommy was not a flashy performer," he recalled, "but he did a steady, solid job in every sport. You'd certainly have to rate him one of the finest athletes ever developed at Kingston High."
Kias recalled some of Maines' exploits for Syracuse as a sophomore under Coach Ossie Solem.
"I saw him run 98 yards with the opening kickoff against N.Y.U. at Yankee Stadium and run wild as Syracuse gave them a bad beating. He also had another big day against the University of Wisconsin."
But injuries began to take their toll and Maines was never to fulfill his early promise at Syracuse.
Kias recalls the circumstances with a touch of bitterness. "Tommy wasn't the kind of lad to complain very much," he says. "He probably played when he shouldn't have and there were times when the coaching staff didn't think he was that hurt. He was banged up pretty much in the rib cage, if I recall correctly."
"Had he been hauled right, I think Tommy could have done much, much better," Kias added. "He was the most natural athlete of my time."

TOMMY MAINES

Maines was a solid .300-plus, long ball hitter in four seasons of varsity baseball. He had a tremendous arm and his throwing ability caused Coach Kias to try him as a catcher.
"I thought Tommy had great potential as a catcher," said Kias. "He was tall and rangy and could really throw. But he never really liked it and finally I abandoned the idea."
In football, he was a heavy duty running halfback in the old single wing system then used by Kias. Big and strong, he was a tough man to bring down.

Kias also used him on 4th down punting situations. "In those days, when football was more defense-minded, it was not uncommon to punt on third down, quick-kick situations." The late James Cullum, the team's quarterback, did the quick-kicking and was extremely adept at booting low liners over the head of the defensive backs.
Maines, who could kick the ball long and high, took over on 4th down situations. "The opposing teams seldom got a chance for long returns on those high kicks," says Kias.

Maines was a shotput and javelin specialist on the track squad and his debut as a javelin thrower came under interesting circumstances.
"In those days, we didn't throw the javelin in DUSO track meets," Kias recalls. "But we had a meet scheduled with New York Military Academy and they had a hotshot javelin thrower.
"The track coach there insisted that the javelin event be included in the meet. 'We don't have a javelin thrower,' Kias pleaded.
"Well, the javelin event is on the schedule and we expect you to have a thrower when you come down here," replied the NYMA coach firmly.
"So, we got busy," says Kias. "I bought a javelin and had Tommy work out a few times before we went to Cornwall. On his first throw — the first time he had ever thrown in competition — Tommy heaved it 167 feet. That mark stood as a KHS record for many years. Oh, yes, that NYMA lad never came close to Tommy's toss."
As a three-year varsity basketball performer, Maines was not a high scorer by modern standards, but the sport was also defense-oriented in his time. Kias praised him as a "terrific rebounder and defensive player. He could tip shot and bat them away from the hoop as well as any player I ever saw. Today, that would be ruled goal tending, but it was perfectly legal in those days."
After leaving Syracuse, Maines concentrated pretty much on semi-pro baseball in the Kingston area. He played with Fred Davi's New York State League squad and was one of the early members of the fabulous Kingston Recreation at Dietz Stadium.
Tommy Maines, who went to an untimely death, remains timeless in the athletic legend at Kingston High School. The tribute to him in the homecoming game with Poughkeepsie High will be a splendid tribute from one generation to another.

Mistakes Costly to Maroons

By MORT LAFFIN
KINGSTON
"Our own mistakes have cost us all three ball games. We haven't been able to play the type of ball that we are capable of because of senseless errors and simple mistakes. The teams signal-caller, will start the game for the Maroons. Ralph Perry, a fine quarterback who shared the duties with Littlefield, suffered a fractured wrist in last week's game with Gloversville.
With these words, Kingston

High School Varsity Football Coach, Tony Badalato, summed up his feeling on the first three games of his initial season as varsity mentor for the Fighting Maroon.
Glenn Littlefield, junior signal-caller, will start the game for the Maroons. Ralph Perry, a fine quarterback who shared the duties with Littlefield, suffered a fractured wrist in last week's game with Gloversville.
Badalato had a good situation going with the two fine Q-backs, blocker who can also run with deceptive speed and power. Dennis Harrison will be Littlefield's backup man.

Harrison is a fine athlete and can throw the long ball. But he has been used as the split end for most of the season and has very little work at the quarterback slot. If he has to play that position, it may hurt the Maroons. Not because he doesn't have the ability, but because he lacks experience at that particular position.
Don Lackaye will be at the other end. Lackaye is a fine blocker who can also run with deceptive speed and power. Dennis Harrison will be Littlefield's backup man.

Harrison is a fine athlete and can throw the long ball. But he has been used as the split end for most of the season and has very little work at the quarterback slot. If he has to play that position, it may hurt the Maroons. Not because he doesn't have the ability, but because he lacks experience at that particular position.
Don Lackaye will be at the other end. Lackaye is a fine

Mark Snyder is the flanker-back and is a fine pass receiver and runner. However, Snyder is coming off an injury and how effective he will be against the Pioneers remains to be seen.
The line is anchored by center Tim Palen. Big Tim gives 110 per cent on every play, offensively and defensively. He is Gloversville and is rated a "comer" by the coaching staff, open the hole for the running game. If desire means anything, man on this squad. He plays and, it does. Palen will be the full game, offensively and best at whatever he attempts anytime, anywhere.

RALPH PERRY

Haarrumphhh!

The last slate picked on the local level involved a total of seven games, six of which I picked correctly, including one perfect score. Had it not been for sentimentality on my part in selecting the Maroons of Kingston to defeat Gloversville, I would have been perfect. Ah, well, we can't have everything. Ha-kaff, kaff, kaff.

The six-of-seven was good for a percentage of .858. The winners give me a total of 18 right, 10 wrong and one tie for an overall percentage of .643. Quite a bit better than the .538s and .562s I was fooling around with.

This week, Kingston isn't going to let me down, and, neither is anyone else. This is it folks, the first perfectly selected slate by your Peerless Prognosticator. A real, bonafied 1,000 per center if I ever saw saw one. And, I have, believe me I have. Cough, cough cough.

The Selections:
PHS 24, KINGSTON 6
As I said, Kingston isn't going to let me down this week. The Maroons are on hard times, no matter how you slice it, or call it, or write it. Poughkeepsie still isn't as strong as they have been in recent years, but they still have enough to handle Kingston, Home-Coming Day or not.

The Old Boy Himself

ROUNDOUT 14, PINE BUSH 8
The Ganders are rolling along, but will have a slightly tough time against the eager Bushmen. Pine Bush may not have the offensive power they have enjoyed in the past, but, they still are one of the strongest defensive teams in the Ulster County Athletic League.

HIGHLAND 35, WALLKILL 0
Coach Lem Atkins' boys can beat you more ways than you might think possible. Doug Geer has really come into his own and Perry Monroe always was. So, the Highlanders are one of the most potent teams in the UCL.

NEW PALTZ 22, ONTEORA 12
The Huguenots are really rolling and don't figure to drop this one. Jay Ackert, Bill Schiller and Harold Anderson do most of the scoring for Coach John Ford's boys. One slight drawback: Look for the Indians to score first in this one.

LIBERTY 14, MARLBORO 12
Too much Bruce Rosencrans for the Dukes, who might have too much George Salinovich for the Redskins.

KETCHAM 8, SAUGERTIES 6
The Sawyers seem to be able to get up for the big ones. Witness their fine game against Poughkeepsie and their big win over Arlington. However, they can't seem to put it together consistently. Ketcham, on the other hand, is very similar.

RED HOOK 8, HALDANE 6
The Raiders should have enough to win his one. Though it won't be easy.

ELLENVILLE 6, LIVINGSTON MANOR 0
The Ellies should get over the tie-me-tie-you blues, but it'll be close.

Collegiate Scores:
Georgia Tech. 22, Auburn 6
UCLA 32, Calif. 22
Nebraska 17, Kansas 14
Purdue 28, Iowa 10
Michigan 21, Michigan St. 20
Miss. 28, So. Miss. 14
Notre Dame 35, Missouri 10
Ohio State 42, Minnesota 14

Pioneer 11 Stands Ready

POUGHKEEPSIE Poughkeepsie High School football coach Bill Maher is anything but confident about tomorrow's game with the Fighting Maroons of Kingston. The tilt, labelled Home-Coming Day and a tribute to Tommy Maines, former KHS and Syracuse University star, will begin at 1:30 p.m. at Dietz Stadium.

"We were in the DUSO League with Kingston, remember," said Maher, a very likeable guy with a vast knowledge and command of the sport he coaches. "I know that even when Kingston is having a down year, they are still tough and can beat anybody. The added incentive of the special day, which we are honored to be a part of, will make them that much tougher." Kingston and Poughkeepsie are in the throes of a rebuilding year and both lack the depth they have enjoyed in previous campaigns.

"We are possibly the thinnest in front-line players and reserves that we have been in a long time," said Maher. "We will dress just 28 players for this tilt and many of them won't play because of lack of experience. We lost 28 players from last year's squad and some of them are very hard to replace."

Only one player from last year's Dutchess County Scholastic League Central Section Co-Championship squad has returned to the offensive unit. He is Tony Johnson, a three-year letterman in the sport.

Tied Arlington
Last year's team tied with Arlington for the DCSL crown and are 3-1 thus far, having dropped a game last week to Roy C. Ketcham High, a game Maher thought his team should have won. Our Lady of Lourdes currently leads the DCSL with a 3-0 record. The Pioneers are 3-1 in the league.

The bright spot in the Poughkeepsie lineup thus far has been the play of Amos-Howard, a speedster halfback who weights just 133 pounds and stands 5' 6". Howard, a junior, has the ability to go all the way anytime. He is very quick off the mark and gets to the hole very fast, sometimes ahead of his blocking.

Starting Backfield
Starting in the backfield with Howard will be: Jack Foster, quarterback; Sheldon Davis, fullback; Dick Clark, flanker-back. Joining Johnson on the line will be Mike Gagas and Bill Vincent, tackles, Ted Alston, split end; Gene Nicolote or Lance Betros and Bob St. Germain, guards; Larry Johnson, center.

Income Provided In a Small Home

A young couple concerned with the future in mind, will find a ready ally in today's feature, named "The Aurilla." For the immediate needs the designer has planned a complete living unit on the first floor. The second floor offers another complete one bedroom apartment. The value is readily visible and the cost of carrying out the plan will be more than offset by the extra income potential. Such planning is ideally suited to a newly married couple or to elderly parents who might need the extra rent money to subdue the financial burden entailed by a one family dwelling. In either case, the house offered today has a definite advantage, as compared with a single family unit. The beauty of this design is apparent with the outward look of a one family home.

The main living area is dominated by a large living room and emphasized by flush ceiling opening to the formal dining space. The rear part of the kitchen provides the L-shape cabinet and work area with space for breakfast table at the center wall. Exterior features vertical V-groove siding at the living room and stock cedar shingles for the remainder of the front, sides and rear. All windows and doors are stock items available at any local lumber yard. "The Aurilla" contains 1,260 square feet of living space on the first level and 756 square feet on the second floor, with outside dimensions of 45' long by 29' depth. Complete working plans are available at moderate cost by using the accompanying coupon.

Says The Green Thumb Perennial Can Be Intriguing

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Garden Phlox—This perfectly hardy perennial is easy to grow, but it also can be baffling, especially when it changes colors. Actually, the plants do not change colors or revert. When blues or pinks or whites change to a different color, it's because the faded blossoms have been allowed to go to seed, and the seedlings, which never come true with most plants, have crowded out the parent plant. So be sure to remove the spent blooms as soon as they are past their prime. Now's a good time to do it. It's also a good idea to divide the plants every three years or so to keep them growing in a healthy state.

Phlox divide easily and the job can be done in fall or spring. Take a spade and separate the clump, then they can be pulled apart. Just make sure each division has three or four eyes or buds. Reset them at the same depth they grew and water them well.

Powdery mildew is always a problem with phlox. This causes a whitish mold on leaf surfaces, worse in damp weather. CONTROL: Provide good air drainage. Cut back severely infected stalks and burn. Spray the plants with Mildelex, starting early in spring.

BIBLE SAYS: DON'T POLLUTE: It's amazing to note how the Bible proves to be as timely today as it was thousands of years ago. Want proof? Turn to the Book of Numbers, Chapter 35, line 33, which reads: So ye shall not pollute the land wherein ye are." The Bible also predicted the automobile and airplane ("horseless carriages"). We cannot do without autos, but did you know that motor vehicles contribute a good half of this country's air pollution? That's why it's a good idea to plant all the trees we can. Our trees are dying at the rate of 1,000,000 a year. We need at least three trees for each person on earth. Good landscaping means planting more trees. They help cut down on your fuel bill in winter and make your home cooler in summer. A properly located shade tree can reduce summer room temperatures as much as 20 degrees.

Trees not only eliminate the "attic furnace" but will cut your fuel bill by as much as 30 percent by acting as a wind-break. Trees help purify our air by taking off carbon dioxide and giving off oxygen. We should plant 10 trees for every 100 cars and 100 trees for every truck on the road.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: A reader writes: "We planted our Easter lily outdoors in spring and it blossomed this fall. Does the bulb need winter protection?"

Answer: No, it's perfectly hardy, and should blossom each year. Divide every three or four years. Some gardeners have had good luck digging it up and bringing the bulb indoors for Easter flowering.

Get Rid of the Junk Before Selling House

Of course, there's a lot of junk in and around your house. BUT, if you want to sell your house, you'd better get rid of it before prospective purchasers make an appearance.

As any real estate broker knows, first impressions are important to people in the market for houses. Many a house that is structurally sound gets a thumbs-down response from a buyer because it didn't look right, either on the inside or the outside or both.

When a place has a neat appearance, the onlooker consciously or subconsciously assumes that it is in good condition in other respects. A shabby appearance gives the opposite impression. And the shabbiness may be nothing more than a pile of junk in the backyard or an overloaded, messy clothes closet or a stove that doesn't seem to have been cleaned in weeks.

Even excess furniture, which most of us accumulate over the years, can have a poor effect on the onlooker. A living room crowded with too many chairs and tables can appear to be smaller than it is. Poor lighting can have a similar effect, even though you may feel that the subdued lighting provides a sophisticated atmosphere. Replacing some of those small wattage bulbs with larger ones can give a cheery appearance as well as opening up dark corners and creating the impression of more space.

These days people are more conscious than ever about maintenance costs, what with high interest rates and the like. When they see something that is going to cost them money during the first few months of their residence, they tend to shy away from a purchase. For that reason, a house should be repainted before it is put on the market, assuming that it is in need of a new overcoat.

The repainting may be the very thing that will help to sell the house more quickly. And it need not be lost money, since the cost of the paint job, if made for the specific purpose of aiding the sale, can be added to expense at income tax time.

All this advice is predicated on the fact that many persons tend to neglect the appearance of a house once they have made up their minds to sell it. Professional speculators who buy an old house for the purpose of

Police Arrest One, Seek More In Bank Heist

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — One suspect in a bank robbery Thursday in nearby Latham faces arraignment today in federal court, but another man, and possibly more, wanted in the incident remains at large.

Police took Kent DeShaw, 34, a Pittsfield, Mass., laborer, into custody in a department store minutes after the robbery of the Cohoes Savings Bank Latham Corners branch.

They said they believed an accomplice fled in a light-colored automobile with Florida license plates.

Between $5,000 and $10,000 was taken in the noon hour hold-up by a man who produced a note saying, "Give me money—I've got a gun." None of the money was recovered.

The teller, who said she saw no gun, handed over money and pressed a hidden alarm button. A male bank employee chased the bandit into a parking lot and moments later Town of Colonie Police arrested De Shaw in the nearby store as shoppers looked on.

County Has Most Students At UCC

STONE RIDGE — Seventy-nine per cent of the new full-time students enrolled this fall at Ulster County Community College are residents of Ulster County.

President George B. Erbstein announced today.

There are a record 762 new full-time students at the community college out of a total of 1,313. The new students reflect a 55 per cent increase over the 491 new full-time students the college had when the Stone Ridge campus first was opened in the fall of 1967.

Twenty per cent of the new full-time students come from other New York State counties, with 10 per cent of these being from adjoining counties to Ulster. Less than one per cent of the new students come from outside New York State.

Of the 762 new full-time students, 471 or 61 per cent are males, while 291, or 39 per cent, are females. In 1967, 69 per cent of new students were males while only 31 per cent were females.

Of the 600 new students who are from Ulster County, almost 400 were June, 1970, graduates of Ulster County high schools, according to Director of Admissions, Charles Schenck. Fifty-six students, or seven per cent, are veterans, while others from the county have waited for one reason or another to start college.

Of the 393 June graduates from local high schools who are enrolled at UCC this fall, 184, or 26 per cent of the graduating class, are from Kingston High School.

Fifty-five students, or 26 per cent of the graduating class, are from Saugerties High School, and 36, or 21 per cent, of the graduating class, are from Rondout Valley High School.

Other high school students and the percentage of their graduating class attending UCC are: Onteora High School, 30 students or 17 per cent; Coleman High School in Kingston, 23 students or 28 per cent; Ellenville High School, 22 students or 16 per cent; Highland High School, 16 students or 15 per cent; New Paltz High School, 13 students or 10 per cent; Marlboro High School, seven students or seven per cent; and Wallkill High School, seven students or five per cent.

Of the new full-time students, 363 are enrolled in the Liberal Arts program up 56 from last year. Other increases were shown in Business Administration with 79 students, up 24 from last year; and Police Science with 42 students, up 24 from last year.

Vermont Taking Action Against Paper Firm

TICONDEROGA, N. Y. (UPI) — The state of Vermont plans legal action, probably in the U. S. Supreme Court, to ask a shutdown of the International Paper Co. plant here and an end to pollution of Lake Champlain.

Henry Black of White River Junction, Vt., the IP counsel in Vermont, had no immediate reaction to the plans announced Thursday by Vermont Atty. Gen. James Jeffords.

The official said he would ask U. S. attorneys in Vermont and New York to file suits under the 1899 federal Refuse Act and seek the maximum fines of $2,500 a day against the company for polluting the lake.

Other objects of the suits are to close the current IP plant, scheduled to be phased out by next year, order continued payment of employees temporarily out of work, and seek immediate removal of 300 acres of accumulated sludge in the lake.

In addition, Jeffords said he will seek damages from IPC for both the state of Vermont and Addison County shoreline residents.

The actions, to be filed within two to four weeks, could cost International Paper upwards of $10 million, Jeffords said.

The attorney general said he reached his decision to turn to the courts after receiving a response from Edward Hinman, IPC president, to his Oct. 5 letter asking the firm for a commitment to remove, at its own expense, the sludge.

Jeffords called Hinman's response "quite obviously not a satisfactory answer" and said Vermont has "no choice but that we must bring court action against IPC."

Hinman's response called for further study of suggested alternatives for eliminating the sludge, and raised the question that removal of the deposits could cause ecological damage.

Jeffords also accused Hinman and his company of having no intention of living up to an agreement hammered out last month with Govs. Deane C. Davis of Vermont and Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York.

Dear Abby

Ground Her or No?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
(© 1970 by Chicago Tribune)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl and I am being grounded for a whole month for something I don't see anything wrong with.

I was invited to a party at a girl friend's house, and went with my parents' permission. My boyfriend picked me up at 7 o'clock and I told my mother I would be home at 11 o'clock as it was a school night.

When I got into the car there was another couple there, and they suggested driving downtown first, so we did. We noticed there was a movie playing that we all wanted to see, so we went to the movie instead and had a bite afterwards. I got home at exactly 11 o'clock like I said.

My mother was standing in the doorway waiting for me, and boy was she ever mad! She said she wanted to tell me something so she called my girl friend's house and I wasn't there.

She accused me of lying to her, which I didn't do, as we changed our plans after I got into the car. You be the judge, Abby. Did I do anything bad enough to get grounded for a month?

OKLAHOMA CITY DEAR OK: That is (and was) up to your mother to decide. You should have telephoned your mother as soon as you changed your plans. The one unpardonable "crime," as parents view it, is changing signals and not letting parents know you weren't where you said you'd be.

DEAR ABBY: Walter is 45 and we have been married for 24 years. Our only child was recently married which leaves us entirely alone again. Well, as soon as our son went on his honeymoon, so did my husband. Right here at home. He is making a wreck of me. Our marriage never lacked love before, but you would think it did when I take a bath because Walter wants to jump into the tub with me. Believe me, I am not all that irresistible. I am 44 and look my age. What should I do?

WALTER'S WIFE DEAR WIFE: Lock the bathroom door. And tell Walter to take showers. Cold ones!

DEAR ABBY: You are the only person I can tell my problem to. My daughter has recently married a fine young man who lives in our town. She did "well" by anybody's standards, and is starting out with much more than I have after 25 years of marriage.

Sh has always been a good daughter and I considered myself a good mother, but we have been "pals" in the sense that two girls would be. She has suddenly found a "pal" in her mother in law, who has never had a daughter. They go everywhere together. They even dress alike, and see each other every day—practically all day.

Of course I am glad they get along, but I am very hurt. Perhaps I'm jealous. But how do I calm this aching heart?

HURT MOTHER DEAR MOTHER: The mother in law bit is "new" to your daughter, as is the "daughter" bit to her mother in law. In any case, don't be "hurt" or jealous of a relationship you and we have been married for 24 years. Our only child was up. She's a big girl now and if she wants to pal around with her mother in law, it's her right.

DEAR ABBY: First let me say that we have been married for 15 years and my husband is no saint. (Neither am I.) But he does something which makes up for an awful lot.

He has never left the supper table without first complimenting me in some way, then he will walk around and give me a kiss and say, "Thanks."

The nicest thing about this little ritual is that our children have picked it up, and I'm certain it will remain with them throughout their lives.

GRATEFUL IN MONTANA What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Jean Adams' TEEN FORUM

TWO DRESSES: (Comment) You are way off base in siding with the mother who thinks two dresses are enough for a 13-year-old girl.

Clothes are so very important to younger teen-agers today. Young kids judge personality by the way another kid dresses. If she is wearing the latest thing she is hip. If she still has on something from three months ago she's weird.

This urge to have the very newest clothes fades out as kids get older. I know. I've passed that way, with all the embarrassment and crying. I'm 19 and over it now. But when my kids are 13 I'll make sure that they can wear what they want.

I agree with most of your answers, but not that one.—Critical Fan in Bridgeton, N. J.

(A.) You misread me. I agree with two dresses only if that's all a girl can afford. There are many girls in the world who don't even have two dresses.

I think it's wonderful when parents can afford a closet full of clothes for their 13-year-old daughter. What bothers me is the fact you accept without question: That many young teens judge one another on dress rather than on personal qualities.

This is inconsistent with today's teen-agers—most of whom profess to look beneath the surface of clothes, hair, and make-up to what a person really is.

ACID EFFECT: (Q.) I have taken acid tablets. Could they affect me in later life? What about my children if I get pregnant?—15 and Worried in Connecticut.

(A.) Yes, you and your children you may have could be harmed in the future by drugs you take now or have taken in the past.

For specific details, call or write your local March of Dimes headquarters. It has free pamphlets that discuss the price of drug abuse.

(Want personal answers to your questions? Write to Jean Adams, Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Only letters that include a stamped, self-addressed envelope will be answered.)

Rocky's Street Fund Scored as 'Gimmick'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, running for re-election, says he has $6 million to $10 million in state health emergency funds available to clean up city streets "immediately", if anyone wants it.

Arthur J. Goldberg, his Democratic opponent, says it's all a "cynical, election-eve gimmick."

John J. DeLury, president of New York City's Uniformed Sanitationmen's Association, says it's "an extremely constructive interim step."

The Republican governor's announcement, and the conflicting reactions to it, came Thursday. Interviewed on WOR Radio, Rockefeller announced that New York City could collect about 80 per cent of the money.

In letters to mayors of the state's cities, he said, he has offered to pay overtime for sanitation workers and finance purchases of equipment. If re-elected next month, he declared, he would make his basic goal to "restore the sense of security and safety of the family" and two ways to do it would be to reduce crime and clean up the streets.

In an enthusiastic response, DeLury told newsmen Rockefeller's offer "recognizes the fact that the state has to be involved in this vital health area."

He said he would meet with Mayor John V. Lindsay—whose aides had no comment on the offer—"at the earliest possible moment" to urge its implementation.

A spokesman for Goldberg flatly denounced the governor's proposal.

"The streets of our cities are piled with filth—and have been for years—because the state hasn't lifted a finger to help," the spokesman declared.

"Now, two weeks before the election, the governor dangles a $6 million line in front of the voters, hoping they'll bite."

"This last-minute garbage plan is typical of the Rockefeller approach: Ignore a problem for four years, then promise to solve it as the election campaign approaches its conclusion."

Added Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams: "Why, three weeks before the election, is the governor able to announce the availability of funds he has not been able to provide during 12 years in office?"

Later, the governor toured the state Republican campaign headquarters and held a 25-minute private conference with Sen. Charles E. Goodell and aides, which he termed "just a little strategy meeting."

Asked whether the meeting concerned advertising showing Goodell—much criticized by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew—and himself together, Rockefeller replied: "We're all on the same ticket."

Goodell, who picked up an endorsement Thursday from 62 student leaders along with a promise "on the Movement for a New Congress to have 5,000 student volunteers working for him by Election Day, said he has "closed the gap" between himself and Democratic Rep. Richard L. Ottinger.

But in Utica, meanwhile, Ottinger was insisting: "The polls show, and I have found during my tour of the state, that Goodell has had it." His main opponent, he said, was Conservative candidate James L. Buckley.

"The White House feels the same way and they're trying to get Buckley in," he contended.

Back in New York City, Buckley created a stir Thursday when he filed charges against civil rights lawyer William Kunstler before the city's Association of the Bar.

Demanding Kunstler's disbarment, Buckley also criticized the bar association for not having taken action against the lawyer for his conduct at the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial and for his "inflammatory and riot-provoking" speeches on campus.

Buckley first made his demand for Kunstler's disbarment last month. The association then asked for documentation.

He cited Thursday comments by the lawyer in the current issue of Playboy magazine and newspaper reports of his campus speeches.

Speaking later at a rally, Buckley—whose platform pledges all-out support for President Nixon—took issue with the administration over welfare, revenue sharing and narcotics.

"If the President's family assistance plan is going to be just one more highly expensive welfare program, than I am against it," he declared, urging instead "a welfare bill which would replace in its entirety the existing welfare structure."

Criticizing the Nixon revenue-sharing bill as unclear, he said: "I myself have proposed that revenue sharing in fact replace existing federal aid programs over a period of time. We must permit no further federal or state programs which would paralyze initiative at the local or community level."

He also charged the federal government with failing to stem the illicit drug traffic from Turkey, France and elsewhere.

In Geneva, N.Y., the Times newspaper, which describes itself as independent Republican, announced its endorsement of Goodell and Conservative party gubernatorial candidate Paul L. Adams.

The newspaper said it might appear there was a conflict "in endorsing a strong Conservative on one side and one of the most liberal Republicans the Senate has on the other."

But, the paper continued, "at a deeper level there is no conflict." It said Adams has called for lower taxes and Goodell has urged accelerated withdrawal from Vietnam.

"Make no mistake," the Times said, "there will be no lowering of taxes as long as we are involved in Vietnam."

'Hands-Off' on New York: Finch

By United Press International
Presidential advisor Robert H. Finch said Thursday the White House has adopted a "hands-off" policy in the New York election despite recent criticism of Sen. Charles Goodell, R-N.Y., by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

"The White House has a hands-off policy in the New York elections," Finch told a news conference when questioned about Agnew's recent attacks on Goodell.

"Both the senator (Goodell) and the governor (Nelson A. Rockefeller) said they wanted to run their own campaigns," he said.

Finch said Agnew did not represent the administration during a recent New York visit where he attended a private gathering.

"The vice president was invited by a private party to a fund-raising affair and not by the senator or the governor," Finch said.

Asked whether Agnew was acting on his own in his criticism of Goodell, Finch replied: "The President will have to speak to that, and will."

Finch was in Wisconsin cam-paing on behalf of Republican candidates.

James A. Buckley, the Conservative candidate for U. S. Senate who receives some of the funds raised at that Agnew appearance, picked up another tacit endorsement.

California's Gov. Ronald Reagan said Goodell had asked for Agnew's criticism by "going as far as being in total opposition of what his party and party leadership stand for."

"The only Republican running for the Senate in New York is Jim Buckley, who is not running on the Republican ticket," Reagan told newsmen in Sacramento.

Buckley showed Thursday that his support of Nixon doesn't extend to every program of the President's. He proposed a complete overhaul of the welfare system to "encourage the poor who are capable of working to seek employment."

Buckley said Nixon's proposed family assistance plan "places too little incentive for people to get off the welfare rolls and into the job market."

Buckley also filed a complaint to the grievance committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York against Chicago 7 attorney William Kunstler. Buckley said Kunstler has made "inflammatory" speeches in defense of left wing causes, acted improperly at the Chicago trial and should be disbarred.

Non-Hostile Casualties Almost Even With Combat

WASHINGTON (AP) — American casualties in Vietnam are dropping to the level where nearly as many GIs are dying from accidents, illness or disease as are killed in combat.

In fact, the number has been almost equal over the past two weeks.

For the first time since 1965 when the United States began its rapid buildup of forces in Vietnam, more Americans died in a single week from nonhostile causes than were killed in battle.

That was the week of Sept. 27-Oct. 3 when 41 Americans died from nonhostile causes and 38 were killed in action, a 4½-year low.

Last week's casualty toll, announced Thursday in Saigon, showed 46 GIs killed. It marked the 15th consecutive week that U.S. battlefield deaths were under 50. Nonhostile deaths numbered 37.

While combat deaths have dropped to the lowest level in nearly five years, the weekly number of nonhostile deaths has held fairly steady. In the past 15 weeks, for example, they ranged from a weekly high of 48 to a low of 24.

A Pentagon official said there is always bound to be a number of deaths from accidents, illness or other causes among a large number of people, whether civilian or military. Some 380,000 U.S. troops are now in Vietnam.

Since the war began, 43,821 Americans have been killed in action. Another 8,659 have died from nonhostile causes. So far this year, 3,793 have been killed in combat while 1,436 died from other causes.

Political Emphasis in Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Nixon administration, in its consideration of Middle East peace prospects, is placing more and more emphasis on the need to satisfy the political aspirations of the Palestinian Arabs, including the vast number of refugees.

High U.S. officials now talk sympathetically about the possibility of a new Palestinian state emerging in any overall settlement between Israel and Arabs. This increased U.S. attention to the political ambitions of the Palestinian refugees became evident in the wake of the Jordanian civil war and the death of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

The agreement arrived at this week between Jordanian King Hussein and the Arab guerrilla groups which tried to oust him increased the feeling in official circles here that greater effort should be made to appeal to the Palestinian sentiment.

It is clear, one high U.S. official said, that the dayeven, the major commando force of the Palestinians, has achieved such a strong position in Jordan that Hussein could not make any peace with Israel which the fedayeen did not approve.

At the same time Nasser's death removed the one Arab leader who had been able to resist the pressure of the guerrillas and who could have been counted on to influence the rest of the area to accept peace with Israel.

The high administration official, at a briefing for news executives in Hartford, Conn., last Monday, said that any peace settlement in the Middle East would have to involve giving expression to the Palestinian movement and this very likely would be in the form of some "entity." This is a diplomatic code word for a separate Palestinian state.

The official said there were two problems connected with working out a political solution for the Palestinian refugees, who can no longer be expected to accept the U.N. proposal that they take their choice of going back to the homeland or being resettled somewhere in the area.

The first problem, he said, involved determining just who could speak for the Palestinians in a political sense. The second concerned the geographical boundaries of any new Palestinian Arab state.

Whatever the outcome, it was clear that the death of Nasser and the outcome of the Jordanian war marked a major turning point for American diplomacy in the area.
